HITLER BARRED AT PARLEY

Oliver Twist Hitler

Counterfeiters Whip Girls

CHANCELLOR HITLER imitates "Oliver Twist." Day by day he asks for "more." Today he wants fighting equality with the whole world, "gun for gun." Further, he wants the Polish Corridor eliminated.

That corridor is a strip of land cut out of German soil and given to Poland. Germans living on both sides shut off from each other. Poles feel that they have a right to reach the sea and a right to the Corridor which makes that possible, since they helped win the war.

German families, not much interested in "more guns," having been sufficiently shot to pieces in the last war, agree with Hitler on the "Corridor." Just how much "more" Mr. Hitler wants remains to be seen.

He may get all he asks, if Europe is really tired of war.

Mussolini builds "bombing planes on a large scale," which means that he expects serious trouble and that some cities, for instance, Berlin, may expect trouble when the bombing planes are built.

These new bombers, without taking on fuel, will fly twelve hundred and fifty miles at a speed of two hundred and five miles an hour. That would take them from Rome to Berlin and beyond nicely.

Also the bombers fly at an altitude of twenty-six thousand five hundred feet. Bombs, full of explosives or poison gas, will drop from that height onto a city, and at that height no anti-aircraft gun can possibly injure the airship.

Agitation in the money market always means something, for money is to war what blood is to the body, the most important thing next to brain and courage.

At this moment gold is leaving Paris. Imagine how Paris feels about that. The British treasury is buying gold heavily. With gold you can buy anything, anywhere.

Perhaps England also expects trouble. At least she means to be ready. Money, wisely spent, has often kept her out of troubles worse than loss of money.

There is always something new in fashions, and in crime and criminal methods. Assistant United States District Attorney William G. McCarthy in Boston tells of two criminals making a "complete confession" as follows: The men belonged to a nation-wide ring of counterfeiters, employing and forcing girls to dispose of counterfeit money and "horsewhipping the girls if they refused or failed to pass the money."

Two girls arrested in Lynn, Mass., had been tied to a "whipping post" and whipped violently to increase their interest in the counterfeit work.

That is news.

Drink and automobiling do not go together, safely. Gradually, that will be realized as automobiling drinkers die off.

At Astoria, Long Island, an automobile that had gone over a bank was found to contain one empty bottle, one boy, nineteen years old, dead; one woman "so thoroughly stupefied by drink that she could only yell when asked what killed the boy." The police think it was heart disease and drink.

In Los Angeles, ten thousand women are reported "on strike" against higher meat prices. It would be as well to wait and have a strike on food costs of all kinds, if such a strike could do any good. Indignant ladies must prepare for higher prices, because the government wishes and encourages them. It compels meat packers to pay a costly "processing tax," which, in turn, enables the government to help farmers to better prices.

The difficulty is that when you raise prices among farmers, at the far end of the line, you raise them all the way up through manufacturing, "processing" packing, wholesaling and retailing.

Large sums of money, despite United States laws against lotteries, are won by Americans buying foreign tickets. The income tax department will take more than a third of this money. Old-fashioned consciences would wonder how government could share the profits of an illegal transaction. But government that takes income tax from the "earnings" of kidnapers, murderers and gangsters generally, might as well share in lottery winnings.

34 MORE IN N. E. WIN SWEEPS PRIZES

Names of 34 more lucky New Englanders, who win $478 each, were picked out of the shuffle-drums of the Irish Hospital Sweepstakes today in Dublin.

The Irish drawing ended, with a total of 122 persons in New England winning prizes in the three days during which the drums revolved.

These winners, according to official announcement, will collect at least $175,000.

When the Grand National steeplechase in Aintree, England, is over tomorrow, the New England winnings may be much larger.

Canadian and Michigan drawings, still unfinished, may double the number of New England winners and increase their winnings to $300,000.

New England's chances will ride on 18 of 27 horses listed as starters in tomorrow's steeplechase.

The final ceremony of the Dublin drawing was a special draw

LEGAL BETTING In Maine Favored

Augusta, Me., March 23 (AP)—A minority committee report favoring a bill permitting pari-mutuel betting on harness horse racing in Maine was accepted in the House of Representatives today. A majority of the committee had voted against the bill. The vote was 85 to 43. There was no debate.

Hartford, Ct., March 28 (AP)—Governor Wilbur L. Cross sent the horse racing bill legalizing pari-mutuel betting back to the General Assembly today with a veto, his first of the session.

Youth Breaks Glass, Steals Photo of Deb He Admires

This is a story that Fannie Hurst might snatch from real life to set to the tempo of lyric fiction.

About a young man who admired the picture of a beautiful debutante in a photographer's window.

Today he smashed the window, took the picture, and was arrested.

The young man is George C. Bard, 23, a Boston hardware concern salesman.

His home is in Reading, Pa., and he lives in Boston at a Boston University fraternity house on Commonwealth avenue, Back Bay.

The picture of the beautiful girl stood in the big sidewalk showcase in front of Bachrach, Inc., at 647 Boylston street, in Copley square.

It was a picture of Polly Gardiner of 256 Beacon street, Back Bay.

Bard stood gazing at it this morning.

Suddenly he crashed his fist through the showcase glass, snatched the picture and ran.

Patrolman Daniel J. Feeney collared the picture wooer.

He told police, they said, that he had never seen so beautiful a girl but that he couldn't explain just why he did it.

In court Bard pleaded not guilty to larceny of the picture, valued at $23, was found guilty and placed on probation until September 25. He pleaded guilty to wanton destruction of the showcase glass and agreed to pay $4.50 to have it replaced.

He told Chief Justice Bolster he had taken a couple of drinks. He said:

"There is no excuse for it. The whole thing sounds ridiculous to me now."

Polly Gardiner is in Bermuda with her father, Foster Gardiner. Her mother, amused by the story, said:

"I hope they're not too hard on the boy. Why don't the police let him have a picture of Polly? I will write to her and tell her about it. Of course, Polly is pretty. I'm sure he doesn't know her, poor chap."

This photograph, a Bachrach portrait of Miss Polly Gardiner, attractive and popular Boston society girl, was allegedly so admired by George C. Bard, 23-year-old Boston University graduate, that he stole it from a showcase on Boylston street, today.

$80,000,000 In Rail Pay Raise

Washington, March 28 (AP)—Railroad union men will receive an $80,000,000 wage increase next Monday.

The pay of railroad workers will be restored to the 1931 level, putting into effect a return of the last five per cent of a 10 per cent cut in 1932.

The agreement provides no notice of any change in wages shall be given for at least a month after the restoration but there already have been rumors that railroad management will endeavor to have the wage scale reduced again.

By Associated Press

London, March 28—Sir John Simon, foreign minister, told a crowded House of Commons today "considerable divergencies of opinion" were revealed in his talks with Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler at Berlin on questions of European peace.

Sir John said the German government would not be asked to participate in the three-power talks at Stresa, Italy, called as a result of Hitler's determination to have a German conscript army.

Simon, after talking earlier with King George at Buckingham Palace and United States Ambassador Robert W. Bingham, faced the Commons amid cheers. He rose in reply to the inquiry of George Lansbury, Laborite, on what happened in Berlin.

The visit, the foreign secretary declared, was one of several exploratory trips of British ministers to European capitals and "in view of these circumstances it will obviously be undesirable to make a full statement as to the position, which still is under investigation."

"Unauthorized speculations such as have appeared in some quarters," Simon said, "may be disregarded."

Despite the divergence in views, Simon said, the result of the meeting was "undoubtedly valuable in that both sides are clearly able to understand their respective points of view, a process indispensable to any further progress."

In a reply to Geoffrey Mander, the foreign secretary said he had not heard any proposals to reintro-

Gold Crisis In Belgium

By Associated Press

Brussels, Belgium, March 28—The government today ordered the Belgian Bourses to remain closed for the next three days, beginning today.

The order was published in a special edition of the official gazette. There will be no quotations of foreign exchange in the country during the period the Bourses are closed.

Closing of the Bourses was the government's first open step to clarify the country's perplexing financial situation.

The general view expressed in financial quarters is that a devaluation program will be announced at a joint convention of Parliament tomorrow.

The inclusion of Socialists in the newly created cabinet of Premier Paul Van Zeeland is regarded as settling the devaluation issue and leaving open only the question of the amount and whether the belga will continue to be linked with the gold bloc or join the sterling ranks.

It was announced at the ministry of finance that no statement on devaluation policy would be made until the ministerial declaration is issued by Premier Van Zeeland.

The declaration will be presented to the Chamber for discussion tomorrow.

New York, March 28 (INS)—Belgium's currency, the belga, crashed in the world markets today as the nation's financial markets were closed by royal decree and foreign capitals heard that devaluation by 25 to 28 per cent will be announced tomorrow or Saturday.

Local quotation cracked almost a full cent to 21 cents, an all-time low.

duce compulsory military training in Austria, nor had he heard of any communication between Austria and the League of Nations on the subject.

Sir John said Britain, France and Italy would confer at Stresa, but added:

"I do not think it is possible for me or anybody to speculate as to what may be the possible events after that."

The remark was in reply to James Maxton, who asked the status of the meeting at Stresa, in view of the outcome of the Berlin trip.

Then Sir John scotched the fresh reports Germany would be invited to participate at Stresa.

Hitler Nullifies Peace Pledge for Lithuania

By Associated Press

Berlin, March 28—Failure of European powers to intercede in behalf of the Nazis sentenced by a Lithuanian court was viewed in official circles today as a severe blow to prospects for bringing Germany into line with their peace program.

Protests throughout the Reich against the action of the military tribunal in condemning four Nazis to death and 87 to prison terms were said to have impressed Reichsfuehrer Hitler greatly.

As a result, German sources said the assurances which Hitler gave Sir John Simon, British Foreign Secretary, of the Reich's peaceful intentions toward Lithuania have been virtually nullified.

"Memel is absolute proof," a Wilhelmstrasse spokesman said, "that Germany must be saved by herself.

"It shows once more we must be strong and capable. We cannot depend upon a collective system which always plays against Germany.

May Save Four

"When guarantees favor Germany, somehow or other they never work. Yet we are asked to be stupid enough to give our signature to mutual assistance schemes."

Germany is waiting, the spokesman said, "to see if the powers finally get into action on their own free will" before deciding on what steps to take in an attempt to save the lives of the four Nazis condemned to death at Kaunas.

"Everything possible will be done," the official source said, adding that the prevailing popular indignation verging on violence "should suffice for the moment as our protest."

The hostile manifestations reached their peak in Berlin last night as thousands of Germans milled about the Chancellery rending the air with shouts of "Fuehrer hit them" and "Memel is German and remains German."

The howling mob swept down the Kurfuerstenstrasse to the doors of the Lithuanian legation, where the demonstrators continued to give vent to their resentment while police struggled to turn them back.

The belief that the uncompromising stand adopted by Hitler in the Anglo-German conversations may not have been entirely objectionable to Great Britain was expressed in some German official circles.

These sources pointed out that it has been a cardinal tenet of British foreign policy to prevent any nation from attaining outstanding hegemony on the continent.

Similar rumors to the effect that Great Britain might welcome a degree of German rearmament as a check to France's domination in Europe also circulated in British quarters.

Observers of the two-day conference among Hitler, Sir John and Capt. Anthony Eden, British lord privy seal, expressed the opinion there was no doubt the conversations took a different turn from what the British representatives had expected.

Sir John and Captain Eden, it was said, either anticipated or hoped they would find Hitler in a frame of mind to negotiate concerning Germany's future military strength.

Instead the Reichsfuehrer took the position throughout that Germany's rearmament is her own private business and that other powers are involved only when they are ready to talk reduction or limitation of armaments.

Poland Goes Fascist In Move Against Hitler

By International News Service

Warsaw, March 28—In swift moves foreshadowing hardening of his policy against Soviet Russia, Marshal Josef Pilsudski inaugurated a virtual Fascist dictatorship over Poland today.

A new constitution, drafted on semi-Fascist lines, was adopted. The cabinet, stripped of power, resigned.

Pilsudski picked Colonel Leon Kozlowski as premier.

The Polish Parliament, acting at Pilsudski's own dictation, adopted the new constitution just before the end of its normal session and thus placed the country's destiny in the dictator's hands.

While the form of government was changed, its substance remains the same.

The substance is Marshal Josef Pilsudski.

This iron man of war and politics, literally the savior of Poland, has torn up the constitution and written a new one on semi-Fascist lines.

But as his was the directing hand in the old government and his the purposeful force that upheld it, so his will be the dictator's hand in the new government, and by his word it will stand or fall.

French Senate Votes Huge Military Credits

By International News Service

Paris, March 28 The Senate today unanimously voted 19,586,000 francs in military credits.

The credits, voted by the chamber of deputies March 21, are for expansions ♦ the military establishment already approved by the government.

DEVALUATION BY BELGIUM SEEN

By Associated Press

London, March 28—British financial circles viewed the announcement today from Brussels that the bourses would be closed for three days as an indication the government has definitely decided on a devaluation program and wishes to check the possibility of panicky selling.

Private advices from Brussels to exchange houses here indicate the belief that devaluation will be 25 per cent.

The belga weakened on the exchange market early, selling at 24.00 to the pound compared with an overnight rate of 22.38.

Paris, March 28—A collapse of the gold bloc within a few months was feared by financiers today as a consequence of the reported imminent devaluation of Belgian currency, a sudden Swiss monetary crisis, and the increasing gravity of the French money situation.

4 U. S. DEFENSE BILLS RUSHED

By International News Service

Washington, March 28—With a wave of preparedness sentiment sweeping the chamber, the House today sent to the Senate four measures designed to strengthen the Navy's shore defenses and increase its line personnel.

Early action on other defense measures was promised by leaders in charge of Army and Navy bills.

The measures passed by the House would authorize the Navy to:

1—Spend $38,000,000 on shore establishments, including modernization of large navy yards. A total of $32,000,000 to be spent improving the Pearl Harbor, Mare Island, Puget Sound, Boston, San Diego, Balboa, Coco Solo and the Samoa stations.

2—Increase the line officer personnel by 1032, to meet the demands of a treaty-strength navy.

More Aviators

3—Employ 1012 navy aviators and as many marine aviators as necessary to meet the needs of the airplane-building program which is keeping apace with the navy's ship building.

4—Establish a new reserve cadet air training corps to speed the number of recruits trained for the flying service each year. Authorize the President to transfer naval officers up to the grade of lieutenant-commander from line to staff corps and vice versa.

5—Authorize the Secretary of the Navy to determine the number of officers to be detailed to flying duty as tactical and gunnery observers, and to delay for seven years the involuntary retirement of lieutenants and junior lieutenants who may not be selected for promotion.

Two other national defense measures are pending. Chairman McSwain (D.) South Carolina, of the House military affairs committee, announced a formal report on the proposal to create six giant air bases in strategic parts of the country will be given to the House probably today.

House and Senate conferees ironing out differences in the war department appropriations bill calling for mandatory increases in the Army's enlisted personnel by approximately 40,000, promised early action.

CITY BUDGET Faces Cut

In order to keep Boston's tax rate down to a flat $37 for the coming year, Mayor Mansfield and his advisors were today confronted with the problem of slicing $3,000,000 from the budget.

The reduction must be effected without cutting salaries of any of the 22,000 municipal employes. It is expected that $9,000,000 will be borrowed to provide for public relief.

Anglo-Russ Pact Speeded At Moscow

(Copyright, 1935, by Associated Press)

Moscow, March 28—Foreign Commissary Maxim Litvinoff and Captain Anthony Eden, British lord privy seal, today discussed "the conclusions to which the Berlin negotiations are leading" during a two-hour conference on the peace of Europe.

The British envoy, received with honors, talked to Litvinoff in the latter's office in the Foreign Ministry, and the description of the subject of their talk was made by well-informed quarters but these sources were unable to say what nature of "conclusions" were meant.

It was stated, however that during their first conversation, Litvinoff and Eden "have had no disagreement on the problems discussed."

Their parley was described as being conducted in "an extremely friendly atmosphere."

Peace at Stake

Lord Chilston, British ambassador to Russia, Ivan Maisky, Russian ambassador to London, and William Strang of the British foreign office were present.

Captain Eden informed Litvinoff of the conversations he and Sir John Simon, British foreign secretary, had with Reichsfuehrer Hitler and other German leaders in Berlin, and afterward the two exchanged information and opinions on the most important aspects of the present European situation.

They are to meet again at 11:30 a. m. tomorrow.

The mission which brings Captain Eden to the Red capital is an outgrowth of the stalemate over the proposed Eastern European security pact which Russia insists is a necessary part of the peace system but which Germany has been refusing to accept.

The Bolshevists declare the German attitude reveals aggressive intentions against Russia and contend if Berlin cannot be brought to enter the pact, the rest of Europe should get together on its own account, thus forming a united front against what they call "the Nazi menace."

Ask No Guarantee

They express the belief that the stand England finally will adopt may be the deciding factor for the peace of both Europe and Asia, predicting that if war broke out in Eastern Europe, it could not be localized and would quickly spread around the world.

Litvinoff's thesis is that the East and West are bound up in the matter of peace as war, in his opinion, might easily spread to the other half of the world if it started in either place.

The Russians do not insist that Great Britain pledge military aid for the security of eastern Europe, but they say they want moral support.

If Great Britain were to give Russia such support, a formidable array of power would be lined up against Germany's attitude in holding out against the pact.

DI MARCO MUST Serve Out Term

Mario Di Marco, whose parole was revoked at the time of the Cosmos Club murder of Joseph P. Sweeney, must serve his maximum sentence in State prison until February 14, 1939.

Di Marco was exonerated of complicity in the Cosmos case, but the parole board ruled he was in bad company there.

BARUCH WARNS U. S. ON WAR

Washington, March 28—A wartime policy of barring the shipment of munitions to belligerent nations and warning United States citizens that if they go into the trouble zone they do so at their own peril was advocated today by Bernard M. Baruch, chairman of the World War industries board.

A warning that "civilization would crumble" and the world would revert into "another middle ages" in the event of another World War was also given by Baruch.

A while before, he advocated before the Senate munitions committee elimination of tax-exempt bonds and favored peace-time manufacture of war-making implements.

Trailing a long discussion of the New York financier's war activities, Senator Bone (D) Washington, turned to the effects of another war by commenting that such a conflict appeared "imminent."

"What would happen to western civilization," the senator asked, after other members of the committee had left for the Senate floor, "if another war ever developed."

Swaying from side to side on his feet as he meditated on the question, Baruck solemnly replied:

"The institution of government as we know it would fail, standards of living would go so low that we would go into another middle ages."

Baruch earlier told the committee he once owned $5,300,000 of Liberty bonds, which bear the tax-exempt privilege.

"If we had no tax-exempt bonds —I still have a few myself—taxation would be much fairer," said Baruch. "But I don't see how you are going to eliminate tax-exempt bonds already existing," said Baruch.

"But in the future," asked Senator Vanderberg, "would you favor a constitutional amendment to eliminate tax-exempt bonds?"

"Yes, I would favor such an amendment," said Baruch.

Baruch conceded the government had a difficult time during the war when it attempted to fix prices. He said this difficulty was not so great in price-fixing for the army, navy and allied governments as for the civilian population.

Senator Clark observed that industry during the Wold War "held a gun to the head of government" and demanded higher prices.

"They could do it and did do it," said Baruch, "but they could not, and did not, get away with it."

Baruch asserted he believed the fixing of a "price ceiling" was entirely constitutional.

Baruch said he had investigated the constitutionality of the right of government to take over property in war time and had determined it was constitutional.

Six Massachusetts men and women were drawn for starting horses in the Canadian Army and Navy Veteranse Sweepstake on the Grand National.

They are:

AUGUSTA, J., of 80 Second street, Cambridge, (TROCADERO).

CLOUGHERTY, M. J., of 101 Norton street, Dorchester, (REALLY TRUE).

CREIGHTON, ADA, of 27 Park street, Malden, (MASTER ORANGE).

HINES, MRS. MARY, of 10 F street, South Boston, (BLUE PRINCE).

KELLY, JOHN, of 10 Wayne avenue, Ipswich, (KILTOI).

ROBERTS, T. L., of 59 Front street, Marblehead, (TAPINOIS).

Of these, Michael J. Clougherty, the Dorchester man, had one of the favorites—Really True—and Tremaine Laidlaw Roberts of Marblehead had another good choice in Tapinois.

Each of these six had a chance to win any of the capital prizes, which are $30,000 for first place, $20,000 for second, $10,000 for third, $5000 for fourth. There are two prizes for each placing.

In the drawings of the Veterans of Foreign Wars sweeps out in Michigan four persons, two in Massachusetts, each got horses. They are:

BOSLEY, GENE, of 48 South street, Pittsfield (BUCKWILLOW).

WARNER, N. F., of 16 Riverview street, Hudson (ROYAL RANSOM).

LASSARD, MR. AND MRS. A., of 94 Palm street, Nashua, N. H. (JIMMY JAMES).

TETRUKAITIS, JOSEPH, of 811 Spring street, Union City, Ct. (TROCADERO).

Capital prizes in this sweep are, first, $35,131; second, $23,420; third, $11,710, and fourth, $5855. All starters not in the first four prizes will share $11,710. Non-starters share $23,420.

In the Canadian lottery, Mrs. Mary Hines, who drew Blue Prince is the mother of Major Paul Hines and wife of Peter F. Hines, custodian at the Pemberton square courthouse.

Curley Spurs Hunt for Lost Ship

Governor Curley today appealed to the American and Canadian governments to use all resources at their command to find the Gloucester fishing schooner Arthur D. Storey.

The schooner, a racing fisherman, owned in part by the famous race skipper, Ben Pine, has been missing for three weeks. She left Newfoundland on March 3 with a cargo if oced herring.

The vessel is feared held fast in pack ice, swept there by a savage North Atlantic gale.

The latest news hinting at the fate of the missing craft came today from the Leif, a Norwegian schooner, which reported that a two-masted schooner was sighted in the ice field off Cape Race, Newfoundland.

Governor Curley asked the department of commerce to send an amphibian plane out immediately.

He received assurances that this would be done if possible. The governor also asked Coast Guards to redouble their efforts. Two cutters already are searching.

Eight men are aboard, including the captain, William Nickerson.

A jinx has ridden the ship on trip after trip for several years.

SCHWAB RAPS MOVE TO END WAR PROFIT

By International News Service

New York, March 28—Charles M. Schwab today declared he was opposed to taking the profits of war out of industry.

Returning from the Riviera aboard the liner Rex, Schwab said:

"While profits might be heavily assessed during war, I think it best to leave private capital a real interest."

Schwab, who is chairman of the board of the Bethlehem Steel Corp. and testified in a post-war Senate committee hearing on his wartime profits, reputed to have been among the largest in the country, revealed he is not desirous of being called before the Senate Munitions Committee now in session.

While on the Riviera, he said, he understood a European steel meeting, described in the press as a munitions conference, had been held in Cannes.

"I can assure you, however," he added, "that no Americans attended."

Schwab admitted he had seen much "of my old friend, Sir Basil Zaharoff" during his stay abroad, and was with him when news of Hitler's conscription decree reached the Mediterranean.

Not Disturbed

Although refusing to reveal any of Europe's "Man of Mystery's" confidences, he said the munitions magnate did not appear to be much disturbed over the news. Of the war scare which settled over Europe immediately prior to his departure, Schwab said he did not believe it was "serious."

Amplifying his statement that industry should not be deprived of the profits of war, Schwab explained:

"If capitalists and capital are not assured of some profit in the making of munitions, it's perfectly natural that they would get out of it. The Bethlehem Steel Company, however, is no longer in munitions."

Declaring he had dismantled Bethlehem's munitions plant after the war, he termed the munitions business "a very unhappy one" and said the reason was "too much politics." Filling of standard steel orders for battleship armor plate comprises the company's only munitions activities at present, he said.

Of the current threat of war in Europe, Schwab expressed belief that German rearmament does not mean war even in the future.

"As far as I am concerned," he said, "and as far as those to whom I talk are concerned, there is not going to be a war in Europe."

It was as he discussed international munitions that he voiced hope he would escape the current Senate munitions inquiry.

Quizzed on Profit

Reminded that Eugene G. Grace had been queried on his own wartime profits, which ran into millions a year, and asked point blank what his had been, Schwab replied:

"My profits were only the same as those of any other holder of Bethlehem stock. I did not draw any bonuses as Mr. Grace and other officers of the company did."

Schwab's noted optimism, which he indicated was on the wane when he sailed several months ago for the Mediterranean for his health, was not with him today.

He said he understood conditions were "not so good" when he left, and that, if the stock market is any indication, they became worse during his absence.

He added he highly approves the administration's work relief program and, as always, is unqualifiedly against the dole.

Walker Boy Letters

In Court

READ AS HE PLAYS DURING CUSTODY ROW

Letters from mother to son, letters from son to father were read at the Walker child custody fight in Middlesex probate court today.

Walter ("Sonny") Walker, 10, played in the court corridor while his divorced parents battled for him in the courtroom.

His mother, Maud L. Walker of Weston, sobbed on the witness stand.

His father, Walter H. Walker, retired wool broker, sat grim-faced listening to the letters and to the woman he admitted yesterday he hated.

The letters from mother to son were those Mrs. Walker addressed to "Sonny" while he was away at camp last summer. At the time she was occupying Walker's big Weston house. One read:

"Well, son, it must be for the best or God wouldn't have it so, and when we have a little home all to ourselves you are going to be very happy. That is what God is bringing about for us, our happiness in the end . . .

"Sonny, believe in God as I do and everything will come out all right."

Another:

Tells of Abuse

"Mother has been packing all day, as your father has sent word for your poor mother to get out immediately.

"Well, darling, I am so glad you are not here to see me suffer these days from your father's further abuse.

"He has shut off the electric lights so grandfather and I have no lights or electricity to cook with, and your father has ordered the phone taken out.

"Well, dear, you are a fine son, and that will make up for all mother's grief."

Mrs. Walker denied ever having used profanity to the boy and she said she had given him her entire time last year, eliminating all social activities.

Under cross-examination she twice refused to say whether the boy ever struck her and the question was not further pressed.

A letter the boy wrote to his father after visiting him in New York over New Year's was then introduced.

Mrs. Walker testified that although she usually read "Sonny's" letters to his father, she had not seen this one and would have stopped him from sending it if she had, "because it is not the truth."

The letter read in part:

"I have been fairly peaceable to her right along. She kept threatening to send me to a school for bad boys. She even went and talked with my teacher about me.

"She's going to talk with her lawyer about sending me away.

"Acting Queer"

"She has been acting very queerly lately, and accusing my grandfather of being out with girl friends. . . . It's terrible in the house up in the woods without a telephone."

Mrs. Walker had moved from the big house to a house on Pelham road, Waban.

She smiled at reference to the grandfather, denied ever threatening to send the boy away to school or discussing any such plan with a lawyer.

She denied serving liquor to guests in her home, and when Judge Leggat remarked the custom is no longer a crime, she said: "I do not serve liquor."

Sylvia Moulson, Weston school teacher, described "Sonny" as brilliant, excitable, moody. She testified Mrs. Walker never told her the boy needed disciplinary measures.

STRIKE

Parley Called

BY RICHBERG

Washington, March 28 — The NRA started today to avert a threatened call to all the nation's soft coal miners to walk out next Monday morning.

Across a conference table, Donald Richberg, new Blue Eagle chief, and other members of the recovery administration's governing board, sought information from representatives of the United Mine Workers and Appalachian operators.

The calling of both sides in this controversy to the NRA board's meeting climaxed months of negotiations for new wage and hour contracts for bituminous coal miners.

With the negotiations deadlocked, the present contracts are due to expire Sunday night.

The operators have been told that John L. Lewis, president of the mine workers, will call for a walkout for Monday if new contracts are not signed by that time.

Mrs. Bacon in Royal Bow Low-Neck Gowns in Order

By Associated Press

London, March 28—Low necked gowns will be the almost uniform mode among the debutantes and matrons who enter Buckingham Palace tonight for presentation to their majesties, King George and Queen Mary, at the first court of the season.

STELLITA STAPLETON

MRS. GASPAR G. BACON

MRS. ROBERT W. BINGHAM

Only a few elderly women, fearful of catching cold, have been granted permission to wear gowns with high neck lines. The lord chamberlain has insisted on strict observance of the costume regulations which many have ignored in the past.

Eighteen American women will be presented tonight and tomorrow night by Mrs. Robert W. Bingham, wife of the United State ambassador.

Among the women is Mrs. Gaspar G. Bacon of Jamaica Plain, Mass., wife of former Lieutenant-Governor Bacon of Massachusetts.

Along with the others who are accorded the privileges of curtseying before Great Britain's King and Queen, the American women will be required to wear full-length trains and the traditional three feathers arranged neatly in their headdress.

The gowns selected are dignified and unostentatious, many having necklines off the shoulders.

Besides Mrs. Bacon, the following will be presented by Mrs. Bingham:

Mrs. Jessie I. Straus, of New York, wife of the American ambassador to France.

Miss Jeanne Millet, New York City.

Mrs. Medley G. B. Whelpley, Connecticut.

Miss Stellita Stapleton, Washington, D. C.

Miss Carolyn Nash, Cartersville, Va.

Miss Jean Watts, Lynchburg, Va.

Miss Anne Richardson, Mississippi.

Miss Mary Pye Hutcheson, Houston, Texas.

A second court will be held tomorrow evening, when Mrs. Bingham will present nine more American girls and matrons.

WOMAN

Killed, 3 Hurt

IN CRASH

Uxbridge, March 28—A girl was killed and one girl and two men were injured today when their automobile grazed the rear of a truck on Quaker highway, and then crashed into another truck.

Miss Gertrude M. Pendergast, 25, of Elm street, was killed.

Courtney Little, 21, of Oak street, suffered a compound fracture of the lower jaw; Miss Victoria Stefanick, of Fletcher street, lacerations of the right cheek. Wiley Aldrich, 28, of North Main street, driver of the car, suffered a concussion of the brain.

40 MILLIONS

To Raze El

The federal government will be asked by Governor Curley to contribute 40 million dollars to the cause of removing the elevated structure between Sullivan square and Forest Hills, and substituting all-underground line.

Jailed as Spy

Berlin, March 28 (US)—Frieda Wittman, 25-year-old German girl, was convicted of "betraying military secrets" and sentenced to 12 years imprisonment by the People's court today.

MISSING

Girl, 14, Feared

ABDUCTED

By Associated Press

Old Saybrook, Ct., March 28—Bloodhounds, 25 men and Boy Scouts and four state policemen combed woods here today for Alta C. Miller, 14-year-old high school girl who has been missing 24 hours.

Mrs. Leon Miller, the girl's mother, told state police last night she feared her daughter had been abducted. Police and relatives scouted any theory Alta had run away from home.

She was last seen yesterday by Patricia Wixon, a friend, after the two had parted in the lonely wooded section separating their homes.

Alta, a Girl Scout, was said to have been thoroughly familiar with the woods, and there was hardly any possibility she could have become lost.

Bloodhounds were able to pick up the girl's trail for more than a mile, but lost all trace of Alta about a half mile down a dirt road.

Police expressed the theory the girl entered an automobile at this point.

NAGLE DEAD?

All News to Him

Representative David G. Nagle of Ward 7, South Boston, denied vehemently today that he was dead.

A notice appeared in the morning papers to that effect, and the Nagle home at 425 Sixth street, South Boston, was bombarded by calls.

"I would certainly like to catch up with the one responsible for this 'joke,'" Representative Nagle said.

Blonde Pushes Loew Suit

Decries "Scandal," Asks $100,000 for Child

By International News Service

New York, March 28—Collette Francois, blonde French actress, newly arrived to press her $100,000 paternity suit against Arthur M. Loew, today decried "scandal" of the action.

But she reiterated she would go through with it for the sake of her four-year-old daughter Catherine. She declared:

"Mr. Loew cannot escape his obligations. Because of him I renounced both my career and my hopes of marriage. But he must support the child."

She was unperturbed by the New York state anti-heart balm bill now awaiting Governor Lehman's signature, and her attorney indicated there were other grounds for suit which he would clarify in an amended complaint.

8 STRIKERS HELD

In Malden Beating

On warrants sworn by a worker who claimed he was beaten, eight striking employes of the Malden Knitting Mills were arrested today.

hey denied their guilt and the case was continued a week. George W. Howe of Leonard street, Malden, claimed they beat him.

QUINS Under Armed GUARD

POLICE MOVE INTO HOSPITAL

By Associated Press

Callander, Ont., March 28—Armed police moved into the Dafoe hospital today to guard the famous Dionne quintuplets against possible kidnaping.

Constables W. McCord and W. Noyes of the Ontario police will watch over the famous children who are 10 months old today, sleeping and eating in the hospital attic.

The move indicated the Ontario government still places credence in rumors of a plot to spirit the children out of the control of provincial authorities into the United States.

It was one of the first official acts under the new guardianship set-up formally approved yesterday when Lieutenant-Governor H. A. Bruce signed an act of the Legislature making the children "special wards of His Majesty the King."

Dr. A. R. Dafoe will continue to act only as "medical guardian."

He declared his young charges completed their first 10 months of life in the best health they ever have experienced.

Gaining weight steadily, the suntanned, blue-eyed girls are pictures of health.

As becomes young ladies moving out of babyhood, they are rapidly getting away from bottles, adopting spoons and glasses.

The babies now spend their mornings on the uncovered veranda looking out over fields still deep in snow.

Enrollment Opens

Enrollments in the Citizen's Military Training Camps, which will start tomorrow, may be made by applying to the Army Base in Boston.

The camps this year, from July 8 to August 6, will be at Fort Devens, Fort Adams, R. I., Fort Ethan Allen, Vt., and Fort McKinley, Maine.

Barbara, Near Home, Lacks Cash to Pay Radio Tolls

By Associated Press

S. S. Bremen, Nearing New York, March 28—Princess Barbara Hutton Mdivani, one of the wealthiest women in the world, was running short on money today as she neared the Statue of Liberty, beckoning her with upraised arms in the direction of Reno and a divorce from her prince—whom she left "somewhere in Europe."

Her wireless tolls to London, as she sailed for home across the Atlantic, had amounted to more than 1000 marks—$400—and the princess did not have enough cash with her to pay the bill.

Karin Gustafson, her Swedish masseuse and maid of three months, asked the radio department to give the heiress of the Woolworth millions credit. The request was granted.

Princess Barbara remained secluded in her cabin throughout the day, but friends said that she seemed the most cheerful she had been since she left London.

She hummed tunes, was talkative, and was interested in food for the first time since the voyage started. She ate breakfast at 7 a. m., after putting away a full-sized dinner last night.

The Bremen will arrive in Quarantine at 3 p. m. and is expected to dock at 5 p. m. today.

New York, March 28—She's all through with foreigners and their titles.

Princess Barbara Hutton Mdivani's next husband—if any—will be an American.

The words of the ultimatum were the words of "Jimmy" Woolworth Donahue, but the thought was Princess Barbara's, styled by Jimmy as "the kid cousin." Only the topic of Prince Alexis was taboo.

Cousin Jimmy and the princess were together when they let down the interview bars ordered by their New York attorney, said Jimmy.

"Barbara's next husband will be an American, believe me. That is, if there is a next one."

And her highness nodded agreement:

"That goes for me, too."

Whereupon Jimmy went on:

"They can take all their foreign titles and keep them. Me for an American."

Within the next few hours there will be a council of war with attorneys, then off for Reno to establish the necessary residence there.

The princess' father, Franklin L. Hutton, already has offered his $120,000 private railroad car, the "Curley Hut," put in readiness for a fast trip to Nevada. Mr. and Mrs. Hutton are now in Florida.

Co-Ed Is Held in Shooting

Girl Sophomore, 19, Accused; Boy Victim

By Associated Press

Tahlequah, Okla., March 28—Miss Lois Thompson, 19-year-old sophomore at the Northeastern Oklahoma Teachers College, was held in the county jail today, while Daniel Shaw, a Chinese student, was given a "50-50" chance to recover from bullet wounds, allegedly inflicted by the co-ed.

The girl chased Shaw for 200 yards across the campus late yesterday, shouting and shooting, Jack Horn, another student, told officers.

"I know he's one of them and I'm going to kill him," Horn quoted the girl as shouting.

The 27-year-old Shaw, who had changed his name from George Hing Siew, was hit by two bullets.

No charges have been filed against the girl, but the county attorney is investigating a series of threatening notes the girl had received since February 27.

She found the last of the series of notes in her locker yesterday.

"You are going to be killed today," the note read.

It was signed, "N. E. S. T. C. Gang."

The notes, carrying threats against the girl's life, demanded $100 at first and later $3000.

3 CHILD VICTIMS OF MAD DOG ARE SOUGHT

Three small Cambridge children were bitten by a dog on the same day last December that George P. L. Reader received the fatal bite which resulted in his death Tuesday from rabies.

These children live in the vicinity of the Reader home in Florence street, Cambridge.

An appeal to the parents of these children to communicate at once with the Cambridge board of health was isued today by Dr. Simon B. Kelleher, medical inspector for the board.

He said:

"It is possible that these children were bitten by the same stray mad dog which caused Reader's death.

"I appeal to the parents to bring their children to City Hall for examination."

According to Dr. Kelleher, it was a brown and white mongrel dog which bit Reader. The dog is still at large.

Clinics for the immunization of all dogs may be established in Cambridge, he said.

Girl's Place at 'Home'? No; at First Base for Nellie Baseball used to be a man's game, but here is Nellie Twardzik, bobbed and dimpled Webster high school girl, who has all the boys on the Barlett high nine worried about their jobs. She plays first base, and if she does a better job than the boy candidates, the post is hers, says Coach George H. Finnegan.

LOUIS HOWE
Slightly Better

Washington, March 28 (US)—Colonel Louis McHenry Howe, secretary to the President, is reported slightly better, but still in a critical condition.

He was able to eat a good breakfast of cereal and coffee, smoked a cigarette, and seemed to rest much easier.

Girl Player on School Nine

Boys Worried Over Bobbed Slugger

Webster, March 28—Dimpled and bobbed Nellie Twardzik, 15-year-old queen of "Nellie's All Stars," had practically no competition for a place on the Bartlett high school nine today.

That is to say, she had Coach George H. Finnegan with her; also School Committeeman Herbert C. Branch, and a vast contingent of the co-eds and their mamas and sisters.

Only the boys on the baseball team were annoyed. And they, poor lads, were torn between their natural aversion to an inroad by one of the weaker sex and a desire to be big-hearted and chivalrous.

Object of Nellie's attention was the spot at first base. Tony Szamocki veteran at the post, could only gulp and say:

"If she gets it, will my face be red!"

Nellie was determined to get it too.

Coach Finnegan said it made no difference in his life if a girl broke all precedents of Bartlett high by winning a spot on the team. He explained:

"If she comes out for practice and shows ability to make the squad she can have a place on it. It's all the same to me."

In the hope that Nellie, who played with an amateur barnstorming nine—the "All-Stars"—may turn out to be another "Babe" Didrickson, an honorary chaperoning society was being formed today by a group of sports-loving Webster women.

BLONDE FAILS TO APPEAR

Miss Beatrice Best, broker's secretary and described as a stunning blonde, and her employer, Arthur E. Gibbs, both of Springfield, failed to appear today as witnesses before the securities exchange commission at the Federal building.

Edmund J. Brandon, regional director of the commission, directing the probe of the affairs of the Winchester Institute of Finance and the Polymet Manufacturing Company, declared that a wide search is being made for both witnesses.

According to Brandon, Miss Best and Gibbs are wanted to testify concerning sale of stock in the Polymet company, makers of an "electric eye."

About $1,000,000 in cash and securities is missing from concerns under investigation, according to Brandon.

Carl Lindblad and his wife carried their children, Harriet, five, and Carl, two, from their burning home in Salem street, Malden, near the Revere line, today.

They were awakened to the peril of flames by Mr. and Mrs. Henry D. Craig, other occupants of the two-family house.

Revere firemen helped fight the flames which originated in defective wiring and caused $2500 damage.

MORE POLICE

DELAY RELIEF FUND PLANS

By International News Service

Washington, March 28.—No plan for spending and administering the $4,880,000,000 work-relief fund will be formulated until after Congress has completed action on the measure, the White House announced today after telegraphic communication with President Roosevelt in Florida waters.

The statement was made to offset reports that Harry L. Hopkins, federal relief administrator, and Rexford G. Tugwell, under secretary of agriculture, would be "key men" in spending the huge sum.

The Senate-House conference on the bill was temporarily deadlocked today on the question of limiting President Roosevelt's discretion by allocating funds for specific types of projects.

Administration members of the conference favored elimination of many allocations, but others sought more binding allocations.

The conference was carried on behind closed doors.

PINK SLIP VOTE SNAGGED BY NEW TAX ROW

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON, International News Service Staff Correspondent

Washington, March 28—A sharp constitutional argument over the right of the Senate to attach a $300,000,000 income tax increase to its repeal of pink slip publicity today delayed enactment of the repeal measure.

Senator LaFollette (P.), Wisconsin, offered the amendment. Senator Harrison (D.), Mississippi, raised a point of order against it and Vice-President Garner launched the debate by submitting the question to the Senate itself for decision.

Senator Long (D.), Louisiana, a lawyer, joined with Senators Vandenberg (R.), Michigan, and LaFollette, two laymen, in defending the constitutionality of the amendment.

Garner, in submitting the question to the Senate, followed a 100-year-old custom.

Vandenberg said:

"This bill touches the revenue act of 1934. It repeals one section of that law. By passing this bill, the House has opened the door to further modification of that revenue act. The Senate has a right to go through the same door and change other sections of the same law."

Norris, Harrison and others said the pink slip repeal was not a "revenue raising measure."

The bill was attacked as unconstitutional by Senators Norris, Nebraska; Borah, Idaho; Robinson, Arkansas; Barkley, Kentucky, and Connally, Texas, all lawyers. They argued the Constitution required all revenue raising measures to originate in the House.

Long, Vandenberg and La Follette argued the pink slip repeal had originated in the House, that it repealed one section of the revenue act of 1934 and thereby laid the whole revenue act open to Senate amendment.

MAYOR SCORES TAX RATE BILL

Mayor Mansfield said today the Legislature would establish dangerous precedent and menace city jobs if it fixed the city tax rate, rather than the tax limit as heretofore.

He assailed the report of the municipal finance committee which yesterday recommended fixing the tax rate at $37, and declared its adoption might force wholesale discharges of city employes. He said:

"The committee states it believes the city can provide sufficient funds under its bill without disturbing the present salary schedule. That is utterly impossible.

"The committee shows interest in the taxpayer and the employers by this gesture, but makes no suggestion as to new sources of revenue to reduce the rate, and it leaves the city with a choice of discharging employes, resorting again to pay cuts or curtailing vital municipal services, or a final course of borrowing large sums of money.

"While I agree that the tax rate must be kept below $37 if possible, yet the form of the bill recommended is so dangerous and unsound as a precedent that I hope it may be sent back to the committee on a point of order, based on grounds that the bill reported is beyond the scope of the petition which accompanied the city's bill."

Rev. E. P. Ayer Dies

Hartford, Conn., March 28 (INS)—Rev. Edward P. Ayer, 72, of Branford, blind chaplain for years of the Connecticut Senate, died today at the home of his sister, Mrs. Lucy A. Gatchell, of a heart attack.

Clean Out Kidney Poisons

Wash Out Your 15 Miles of Kidney Tubes

If kidneys don't pass 3 pints a day and get rid of more than 3 pounds of waste matter, the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters may become clogged with poisonous waste and the danger of acid poisoning is greatly increased. Bladder passages are difficult, which often smart and burn like scalding water and cause discomfort.

This acid condition, brought about by poor kidney functions is a danger signal and may be the beginning of nagging backache, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swollen feet and ankles, rheumatic pains and dizziness.

Most people watch their bowels which contain only 27 feet of intestines but neglect the kidneys which contain 15 miles of tiny tubes and filters. If these tubes or filters become clogged with poisons, it may knock you out and lay you up for many months. Don't run any risk. Make sure your kidneys empty 3 pints a day.

Ask your druggist for DOAN'S PILLS, an old prescription, which has been used successfully by millions of kidney sufferers for over 40 years. © 1934, Foster-Milburn Co.

2 FLIERS DIE

Los Angeles, March 28 (AP)—Two navy fliers from the aircraft carrier Lexington were killed in the crash of a bombing plane off the California coast last night, Admiral J. M. Reeves, commander-in-chief of the fleet, reported by radio today.

They were Lieutenant E. G. Kelly, 27, of Longview, Texas, and Aviation Machinist Mate R. Carillo, 39, of San Diego. Parts of their demolished plane were found.

TRUCK "MENACE"

Trucks coming to Massachusetts from Missouri, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan and Ohio are becoming a growing menace to transportation and industries in this state, Arthur P. Russell, vice-president of the New Haven railroad, today, informed the committee on highways and motor vehicles.

Russell, representing the New England Transportation Company, at a hearing on two bills, asked for regulation

HURLEYS DUE TO FIGHT IT OUT FOR GOVERNOR

By BERNARD J. DOHERTY

The Hurley boys, according to those wise in the ways of politics, will swap oratorical punches for the governorship of Massachusetts.

One of them is Lieutenant-Governor Joseph L. Hurley of Fall River, who was hailed by Governor Curley as the next chief executive of the Commonwealth at a banquet in Fall River a few nights ago.

The other is State Treasurer Charles F. Hurley.

Today it was intimated that Senator Walsh and former Governor Ely would get behind the candidacy of State Treasurer Hurley to oppose the Lieutenant-Governor for his friendship with Curley.

Governor Curley's eulogy of the lieutenant-governor was interpreted in political circles to mean that he would seek the Democratic nomination ror United States Senator in place of Marcus A. Coolidge, who may be tendered an ambassadorship in 1936.

United States Marshal John J. Murphy, of Somerville, served notice today that the Hurleys will have him to deal with if they seek the nomination for the governorship.

He pointed out that his own work in turning Somerville from a Republican stronghold into a safe Democratic city entitles him to recognition for the office of governor.

'STRAW LOANS' OF BANK HIT

"Straw loans" totaling over $2,000,000 were charged today at the hearing of a $3,200,000 suit of four trust companies against the closed Federal National Bank.

John L. Fallon, former auditor of the Federal National, read data regarding the alleged loans.

The Bancroft Trust, Worcester, Brockton Trust, Lawrence Trust and Inman Trust, Cambridge, are seeking the return of the $3,200,000 from the parent bank.

Neil J. Leonard, counsel for the bank commissioner, who brought the suit for the trusts, claims that this amount of money was negotiated on collateral that was not sufficient.

Dempsey Wouldn't Trade His Girl for 40 Boys

JOAN HANNAH DEMPSEY

Celebrating first birthday—and first tooth!

By International News Service

New York, March 28—"Hay Hannah! Here's a guy wants t' talk about our baby!"

With no urging, Restaurateur Jack Dempsey quickly became Papa Dempsey.

Grabbing the reporter in one iron duke and his wife, the former Hannah Williams, in the other, he dashed for the office without a backward glance at the "big shots" who had gathered about him for a little early morning barbering.

"Wh a-d a-y a-w a n t-t o-k n ow about our baby?" the ex-chanm asked.

"Well, ah, are you satisfied it was a girl instead of a boy?" he was asked.

"Boy? Wouldn't take 40 boys for her."

"Whom does the baby look like?"

"Look like? Just get an eyeful of those shoulders. She's a Dempsey all right. But she looks like Hannah, too. She's got Hannah's beauty and my shoulders."

She's eight monthsold now and weighs in at 23 pounds. She'll get a good education and will be a great dancer.

The interview followed release of the first photographs of little Joan Hannah Dempsey, who celebrated the occasion by cutting her first tooth.

TEXTILE HEADS HIT WALLACE OVER TAX

Dexter Stevens vice-president of the National Association of Cotton Manufacturers today flayed Secretary of Agriculture Wallace for threatening to increase the cotton processing tax.

"The whole program of the operation of the AAA under Secretary Wallace has been one of utter disregard of consequences so long as the class in which he is interested is benefited momentarily," said Stevens, Rhode Island mill executive.

Figures quoted by the secretary to show how little the processing tax increases the cost of goods "demonstrates a complete lack of understanding of the true situation," Stevens added.

"A further boost in the cost of living already increased hundreds of millions of dollars by a sales tax levied under the guise of a processing tax, more unemployment among cotton textile workers, shorter time for those working, further liquidation of cotton mills and a decrease in the consumption of cotton will reeult if Secretary Wallace carries through his threat against the cotton textile industry and increases the cotton processing tax instead of reducting it," said Stevens.

"In commenting on imports, the secretary also shows a lack of knowledge of the situation when he says that imports from Japan are less than they were 10 years ago.

"In the two months, January and February of 1935, more cotton goods were brought in from Japan than in any previous 12-month period. The processing tax i sunfair in that it taxes one group for the benefit of another; it is stifling the cotton textile industry as a whole."

In Fall River, James Sinclair, president of the Fall River Cotton Manufacturers' Association, said Secretary Wallace should be ousted for proposing that the processing tax be increased.

Sinclair said Wallace was "incompetent," and urged cotton manufacturers to refuse to pay any additional processing tax.

By Associated Press

Washington, March 28—Senator George (D.), Georgia, told the Senate today Secretary Wallace had "demonstrated his unfitness for a place in the Cabinet" by his attack on the senator's amendment to the Work Relief Bill to permit operation of the AAA from the $4,880,000,000 appropriation.

George said his amendment merely lifted the limitation in the bill which would have prevented use of more than $100,000,000 to administer the AAA.

Norma Content in Prison

Would Be Free if Murt Had Gone to Chair

Norma Brighton Millen was eligible for parole today if the state had electrocuted her husband, Murton Millen. She spent a quiet day in Dedham jail instead.

Jail officials said Norma was biding her time, willing to remain in the jail until the Millen brothers and Abe Faber pay their debt to society.

A month ago a parole petition was filed for Norma, jail authorities revealed, but it was withdrawn at her request.

Today Norma' spent an hour reading in the jail yard, they said.

NAVY YARD HERE PROMISED WORK

The Navy Department at Washington promised today to make every effort to allocate additional work to the Boston Navy Yard to prevent any reduction in employment during the threatened slack period of the next four months.

Congressmen McCormack, Higgins and Healey, accompanied by John F. Cantwell and John B. Murray, representing the Boston Navy Yord workers, and Senator Coolidge, conferred at length with navy officials to urge the additional work.

BRUNO APPEAL JUNE 20

By International News Service.

Trenton, N. J., March 28—Arguments on the appeal of Bruno Richard Hauptmann from the death sentence imposed for kidnaping and murder of Baby Charles Lindbergh will be heard before the New Jersey court of errors and appeals on June 20 next.

This date was set following a brief discussion between state and defense attorneys before the court today, with defense counsel fignting to delay the appeal beyond the May date favored by Attorney-General David T. Wilentz.

VAHEY

Files 55 Motions

IN STOCK CASES

Fifty-five motions and demurrers were filed with the clerk of the federal court today by Attorney James H. Vahey, representing 1 of 25 defendants in stock fraud cases.

The 18 defendants, all charged with running "tipster" sheets, had been given 10 days to file motions.

Several of today's motions ask that the indictments against the men be quashed.

In the indictments, Samuel L. Gains of New York is described as "otherwise known as Samuel Ginsberg." Vahey asks that the phrase be stricken out wherever it appears.

"WHITE WAY"

Given Wide Praise

Inauguration of Boston's "Great White Way" in the furniture district drew wide praise throughout the city today. The district between Broadway and Kneeland streets was made "bright as day."

Mayor Mansfield pressed the button, lighting the section for the Washington Improvement Association, sponsors of the lights. The association has 100 members. Earl W. Pratt is chairman of the committee.

AUTOIST "HIT," COLLECTS, BUT NEXT FAKE FAILS

Here is the fourth article in the expose of fake accident claims that total 20,000 a year and boost compulsory auto insurance rates 20 to 25 per cent, according to Registrar Frank A. Goodwin.

In the phoney claim racket, as in everything else, one good t urn deserves another.

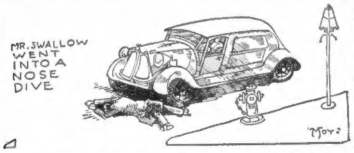
Those who conspire to collect "SINSURANCE" appreciate it.

"You stick my insurance company and I'll stick yours," is the motto scrawled on the racket coat-of-harms that shows a flivver rampant.

Take the bona fide case of Mr. and Mrs. Pill and Mr. Swallow. Of course, those aren't their names, but Mr. Swallow could take it and eventually did—on the lam. Mr. Pill went to jail and his spouse was placed on probation.

Needed Money

This is one of the cases from the files of the Massachusets claims investigation committee, which has secured 69 court convictions on fraudulent claims, caused the disbarment of 19 lawyers, the suspension of five lawyers and the suspension of the right of four physicians to practice—all as a result of fake auto claims. Here's the story:



MR. SWALLOW WENT INTO A NOSE DIVE
MOY

Mrs. Pill owned an automobile. Mr. Pill and Mr. Swallow needed some money.

They went into a huddle and decided that at a certain hour on a certain day Mrs. Pill should be driving her car in a certain place where Mr. Swallow would arrange conveniently to be struck by the car.

This plan was all right with Mrs. Pill who did not like Mr. Swallow, anyway. The latter's chief worry was that Mrs. Pill's inherent dislike of his countenance would cause her to abandon good judgment.

"Just a little nudge," he warned her.

To make sure that the negligence of the insured would be established, the brakes of the car were deliberately loosened.

Fingers Crossed

At 8 o'clock on the evening of January 25, 1933, Mr. Swallow took his place on the curbstone of Temple street, in the West End, with a watchful eye out for Mrs. Pill's car.

Soon it came into sight. She was driving. Mr. Pill was beside her.

Mr. Swallow, fingers crossed, stepped off the curbstone. At the last moment—perhaps noting a glint in Mrs. Pill's eye—he stepped back from the slow-moving machine.

However, they had selected a spot that was poorly lighted and actual contact with the machine was unnecessary. There were no witnesses.

IT WAS THE BRAKES! SAID MRS. PILL
MOY.

Mr. Swallow went into a nosedive in the street. Mrs. Pill screamed. Mr. Pill shouted, "You hit a man."

A crowd gathered and a policeman arrived.

Mr. Swallow, groaning, was a pitiable sight.

Mrs. Pill, assisted from the car, told the policeman:

"It was the brakes; they wouldn't hold."

Then she faked a faint.

Mr. Pill said: "It was the car, officer. She couldn't stop it."

Mr. Swallow was rushed to the office of a nearby doctor and treated for shock and concussion of the brain. He went to bed for a couple of days.

The brakes of the car were tested and their inefficiency was established.

Try Again

Mr. Swallow made claim against Mrs. Pill's insurance company. He collected $85. They split it three ways.

Then they made immediate plans for another accident. Mr. Swallow said he refused to "take it" a second time; he proposed that he get behind the wheel and that Mrs. Pill be "hit."

"Mr. Pill will do it," she said.

"Yes, my dear," he agreed.

Mr. Swallow owned no car so he borrowed the car of his dearest friend on the evening set for the second accident—March 3 of the same year, only five weeks later.

Mr. Pill stepped off the curbing into Massachusetts avenue, Arlington, in a dark spot, waited for Mr. Swallow to bring his borrowed machine to a stop, then cuddled the cobbles and groaned.

Mr. Swallow flagged a passing motorist who rushed the "victim" to a doctor while Mr. Swallow explained to the crowd that the unfortunate accident had occured while he was looking in another direction because he thought he saw the reflection of a fire.

They had been careful to make sure the borrowed car was insured by a company other than that from which they had previously collected, but they had not disguised their names.

Gets Cold Feet

The new claim came to the attention of John A. McArdle, chairman, and Judge Frederic H. Crafts of the Massachusetts Claims Investigating Committee. Boston police Lieutenants Francis P. Haggerty, Martin Kelley and Wilder Dillon, all attached to the office since it was founded in 1931, began a probe.

Mr. Swallow suffered cold feet and disappeared.

Confronted with this development, Mr. Pill admitted the plot. Then the old case was resurrected.

Mr. Pill was fined $50 and sentenced to a month in jail while court placed his wife on probation.

It will be a case of one good term deserving another if the police ever catch up with Mr. Swallow.

The $85 settlement obtained by fraud was added to the losses that raise the compulsory insurance rates.

Many of these based on out-and-out fake accidents are impossible to spot. They are under suspicion but the evidence of fraud cannot be uncovered.

It is even more difficult to prove fraud in cases where there is no conspiracy and a real accident takes place but injuries are faked or exaggerated. These are in the great majority.

(Another case of fraud in the fake claims racket will be told in the Boston Evening American tomorrow.)

DAWES AND RFC HIT IN SUIT

By Associated Press

Chicago, March 28.—Charges of "illegal practices and juggling of accounts" were leveled today against the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, former Vice-President Charles G. Dawes and other directors of the Old Central Republic Trust Company.

The allegations were set forth in a bill, filed in behalf of four stockholders of the bank, replying to a suit instituted recently by the RFC in Federal court to collect $30,000,000 of an $80,000,000 loan made to the old "Dawes" bank.

The cross bill alleged Dawes, other directors, and the RFC acted "in concert" to divert assets of the Central Republic to the recently organized City National Bank & Trust Company to the detriment of the Central Republics' creditors and stockholders.

At least part of a $50,000,000 loan, authorized by the RFC in October 1932, the bill says, was never paid to the Central Republic, but was handed over to the new institution which took over the deposit liabilities of the old bank.

On 45th Ocean Crossing

There's still a thrill—but not much novelty—in an ocean voyage for this veteran traveler. She's Miss Nancy Dyer, Providence, artist, who is crossing the Atlantic for the 45th time, leaving Boston today on the Motorship Saturnia. She plans to paint in Sorrento, Italy. WOMAN VISITS JAILED GIRLS

A woman in her early thirties, dressed in black, today visited Mae Stislow and Ann Etters, dashing young blondes held in East Cambridge jail on charges of possessing and passing counterfeit money.

The woman, who claims to be an aunt of one of the girls, talked with them through the bars.

The girls refuse to take their plight seriously, though they are held in $5000 each.

They showed pleasure at their photographs which appeared in the newspapers, and were smiling and laughing today as they were taken from jail to the office of United States Marshal John J. Murphy.

The girls, who claim they were whipped by men engaged in the counterfeit racket if they did not carry out instructions, were questioned further by Assistant United States Attorney William T. McCarthy.

2 YOUTHS JAILED

In Auto Theft

John McDonough, 22, and Joseph T. Cody, 20, both of Cutter street, Waltham, who were arrested at gunpoint today, were sentenced to a month each in the House of Correction for unlawfully appropriating an automobile.

Cody was given an additional month for assault on a police officer.

Weston police arrested them after a chase.

WIFE MOVES

To Free McKnight

First steps leading to the pardon of Edward F. McKnight, former banker, were taken today by Mrs. McKnight, who received a blank pardon form from Governor Curley's office today.

McKnight is serving a term in the East Cambridge jail in connection with irregularities in the Medford Trust Company, of which he was president.

Wives on City Payroll New Job Targets

City Councillor Henry Selvitella said today he will move to purge city payrolls of married women whose husbands have good jobs.

On Monday, he asserted, he will file a council order calling on all department heads to report the number of married women they employ, what their salaries are and what their husbands do.

A member of the apropriations committee, the East Boston councillor said he knows of two women city employes whose husbands are firemen

TEXAS DIGS OUT FROM DUST

By Associated Press

Amarillo, Texas, March 28—Red-eyed Texans talked today about the worst dust storm of the season in the southwest.

Rising from the dry Mid-West the clouds of swirling dust swept in from the north and spread out like a huge cloud of yellowish red smoke over practically the entire district.

The dust did not hit the southern part of Texas until last night, almost 24 hours after the curling clouds of earth sifted across the northwest Texas border.

A severe wind and rain storm uprooted trees and greatly damaged many residences and business houses in Pearsall, near San Antonio. At Laredo, where the temperature reached 98 in the afternoon, a hail storm struck.

A new storm stirred up vast clouds of dust yesterday in southwestern Kansas and southeastern Colorado.

Skull Fractured

Michael Kearney, 44, of Fulton street, Dorchester, was near death today at Boston City Hospital. He suffered a skull fracture when an auto knocked him down at Preble and Old Colony avenue, South Boston.

HULTMAN FACES PENSION QUIZ

Governor Curley indicated today that ouster proceedings against Eugene C. Hultman will include the matter of a $1300 pension voted Hultman by the Boston Elevated in 1931.

Hultman never received the money, but the fact that it was voted may be incorporated in the case against the former police commissioner, whose removal from the metropolitan district commission will be sought at a public hearing of the governor's council starting next Wednesday.

The governor discussed the case this morning with John P. Feeney, his special counsel.

FIRING SQUAD

Bomber's Fate

Havana, Marche 28 (AP)—A war council today sentenced to death Manuel Fonseca Bellido De Luna, the first civilian condemned to death by military court since the Cuban War of Independence at the turn of the century.

Fonseca may face a firing squad at La Cabana fortress within 48 hours.

He was charged with terrorist activities including the possession of 50 bombs at the time of his arrest March 18.

BITTEN BY CAT

She Says, Asks $2000

Bridgeport, Ct., March 28 (INS)—Allegedly bitten in the ankle and leg by a "ferocious" cat, pretty Mrs. Emma Martin today sued a local market for $2000 claiming the store owner was negligent in not "muzzling the cat."

The animal, Mrs. Martin said, attacked her after another customer in the store stepped on its tail.

CLIPPER PLANE

On Second Hop

Acapulco, Mexico, March 28 (INS)—The huge Pan-American clipper plane that soon is to go into trans-Pacific flight service took off here at 6:15 a. m. today, bound for California. The plane carried 2000 gallons of gasoline.

The schedule for the day called for a flight of 1600 miles, making a total of 3200 miles in its two-day flight from Miami to California.

Hasty Pudding Show Draws Society's Leaders

By BETTY ALDEN

BECAUSE THEY CAME so close together and the cast of each included only members of one sex, we can't help comparing the Vincent Club revue with the musical comedy of the Hasty Pudding Club which had its initial public performance last night . . .

But a comparison is of no value unless one can draw a conclusion from it, so wishing to be both legal and logical we have drawn a conclusion . . . to wit . . . that, on the boards, men make better chorus girls and leading ladies than women make leading men and comedians . . . This may sound involved and will, we suppose, be cause for a bit of partisan discussion . . . Nevertheless, we hold that the buxom, bemuscled damsels of the Hasty Pudding chorus were more successful in getting winks from the bald-headed row than the plumpish soprano-voiced men of the Vincent Club revue, were, in causing flutters in the feminine hearts in the audience . . .

PHYLLIS FORBES

* * *

Shine as Stars

FOR INSTANCE, we would like to introduce to you John Ducey, Jr., and Walter Birge who play their roles as ravishing femininity with a minimum of effort and a maximum of enjoyment . . . Gaspar G. Bacon, Jr., as a scrubwoman is one of the highlights of the show and Francis Johnson, a veteran female impersonator of last year's theatricals, was all that could be desired as a leading lady par excellence . . .

All the boys took the honors and applause heaped upon them modestly and lightly and we won't spoil your surprise by telling you any more about the scenes behind the footlights . . .

The composers have aroused musical sensibilities with their tunes and the lyrics are worthy of special mention . . . Ruby Newman is in the orchestra pit to give the tunes the proper syncopation . . . The cast won't have to fret about changing their tempo to suit strange orchestras when they begin their tour, as Ruby and his men will be their travelling companions . . .

Seen but not heard in the audience which packed the clubhouse last evening were Mr. and Mrs. Andrew J. Peters and Mr. and Mrs. John Cornish . . . Dean and Mrs. Roscoe Pound . . . Mrs. Henry P. McKean who, with her debutante daughter, Marian, had motored up from the North Shore and dispensed with the customary formality of dressing up . . .

Most of the girls there were escorted by fathers or brothers as sweethearts were going through their paces on the other side of the footlights . . .

Molly Wheeler clung to the arm of her handsome father, Edward C. Wheeler, as she watched the antics of her rival actors . . . Molly was one of the leading lights of the Vincent Ventures and didn't want to admit that the boys could do any better than her fellow thespians . . .

Phyllis Forbes naturally wouldn't miss an opportunity to applaud the Pudding actors whose smiling faces beam at her from the tag line of nearly every society dance she attends . . .

* * *

Marion Lawrence in Audience

ANOTHER YOUNG LADY whose escort was her distinguished father was Marion Lawrence, scheduled to shine brightly among next winter's debs . . . Her daddy is Richard Lawrence who proudly introduced her to some of his former classmates . . .

Dorothy Harding was fortunate to have one of her brothers escort her . . . The Donald debutantes, Jane and Marian, were with their aunt, Mrs. Albert Mason, of Milton . . .

Betty Palmer wore a cluster of gardenias with her white crepe ensemble and Caroline Oveson applauded warmly for the boys . . . She wore a frock of pale blue tafetta . . .

Mrs. Lincoln Bryant and one of her sons attended to see the exhibition of masculine talent . . .

Mrs. Roger Scaife was heard humming one of the tunes which Francis Moore composed as she left to find her car . . .

During the intermission everyone gathered to chat in the halls of the clubhouse and agreed that the atmosphere of the ancient house lent a charm to the show . . . Seeing it in its home setting makes the revue more enjoyable . . .

Both in flowered silk gowns, Mrs. Arthur Perry, Sr., and her daughter, Josephine, made a very attractive pair . . . Arthur Perry, Jr., is ticket manager of the show and is the person to approach for seats for the performances of "The Foemen of the Yard" tonight and tomorrow night at the Pudding Clubhouse and Saturday night at the Repertory theater . . .

* * *

Costume Party Planned

IT WILL BE A VERY GAY and notable event at the Copley Theater tomorrow night when patrons are invited to attend the performance of the old fashioned melodrama, "The Drunkard," attired in costumes of the period of the play . . . one hundred years ago . . .

As is very well known by now, this ancient play from the pen of P. T. Barnum was originally produced in 1843 at the old Boston Museum and is now revived with such popularity that it is now running in its sixth week . . . It is understood that there will be considerable rivalry among the younger social element to outdo each other in quaintness of costuming . . .

The lady and gentleman wearing the most authentic and striking costume of the period will be offered a week's engagement in the play . . . They are advised to arrive at the theater not latter than 8:30 p. m. conveyed by either a horse drawn carriage, a velocipede, or bicycle as the equipage of transportation will be taken into consideration in connection with the contest . . . Even roller skates will be allowed as conveyances . . . This same plan was a memorable event during the year's run of "The Drunkard" in New York . . .

HEAVEN HIGH—HELL DEEP

Victorious Fliers Take Auto Trip

Three months after the United States declared war I was enlisted as private first-class in the aviation service of the Signal Corps. Three more months and I was one of the lucky ones ordered abroad. At Issoudan, without any previous training, we started learning to fly the Nieuports, fastest and most dangerous of war planes. We talked, dreamed flying night and day. A test pilot was killed, but his death didn't cool my love for flying. Then suddenly Beauchamp and I were ordered to report to the First Pursuit Group. Arrived at the front I was assigned to a beautiful new plane, a Spad. I saw a German pilot captured.

July 26th.—

Early in the morning, despite mist and light rain, a patrol flew north from Chateau Thierry to Oulchy le Chateau. Five planes started but before the lines were reached, two, with motor trouble, dropped out.

Northwest of Chateau Thierry a German observation plane was sighted.

The three Spads, circling, dove and fired at it in turn. The rear guns of the enemy plane were silenced.

The observer had been shot.

The pilot, without his gunner, was helpless and diving to the ground landed in an open field. The Spads circled lower.

The German pilot dragged his gunner's body from the rear cockpit, threw him on his shoulder and stumbled to an old barn.

Open country below but, during the days of the Allied drive to clear up the salient, each inch of ground was so stubbornly fought for that the exact location of the line was hard to distinguish.

Pilot Disappears

George Puryear, with Avery's victory before him, saw an opportunity to take the Germans prisoners and thinking he was on our side of the lines, glided down.

He did not return.

When, without a word, another day passed we feared he was a prisoner. What would be his fate? Undoubtedly enemy troops had seen the fight and were enraged at our three Spads following and firing at their observation plane as it dove for a landing.

If captured he was on bitterly contested fighting ground.

The mood of fighting enemy soldiers is anything but amiable and they might, in retaliation, shoot him.

When, a few days later, we learned definitely he was taken prisoner we were relieved, for at least he had not been shot. The spot where he landed was, an hour before, Allied territory. When he arrived it was German. A half hour later it had been retaken by the Allies. Such was his luck!

"Well . . . Puryear's alive."

"Alive! hell! I'd rather be dead than a prisoner."

All felt the same.

Life—death—luck—fate—we faced them all and in good grace, accepted what they gave. But to be a prisoner was our direct dread.

* * *

Captain Peterson loaned Avery his automobile for a trip to the front where he shot down Menckhoff. Avery invited three of us to go with him.

We stopped at Chateau Thierry. The Germans had evacuated but a short while before. In their retreat they had completely sacked the town. Everything in sight was demolished. The destruction in the larger houses was deplorable.

Priceless tapestries cut to pieces. Rare paintings slit from corner to corner. Silken brocades and embossed velvet coverings ripped from their frames.

Marble and ivory statues hideously dismembered. Mirrors were smashed; china and glass flung at them, lay in colored heaps. Legs were torn from tables, chairs and settees.

Irreplaceable marquetry and delicate examples of past centuries' craftmanship were in piles. A valuable collection of old books, their bindings ripped away, were torn to bits.

We walked into a nursery.

Salvage Work?

A play-house, toppling and askew, was surrounded by smashed and eyeless faces of dolls; tiny legs and arms poked through a maze of creamy lace and pastel ribbons.

The dainty contents of gaping cupboard drawers were ripped, burned or otherwise besmirched. Was this the salvage of war or the work of battle-crazed lunatics?

Leaving Chateau Thierry we bumped and twisted over roads torn by artillery fire. All was desolation.

At the spot of Avery's victory we met some French soldiers. They told of the recent capture of the great German Ace—Menckhoff. An American colonel, they said, who saw the entire fight, had parts of the wrecked Boche plane.

In an old shack, his newly acquired quarters, we found the Colonel!

"Ah! Aviators!" he greeted us cordially and invited us inside.

In one corner of the room, mounted on two wooden blocks, was—an aeroplane motor.

We inquired about its make and where he got it.

"That!" he said in the manner of one who knows a thrilling tale, "that! gentlemen, is the motor from the plane of the great German Ace Menckhoff."

He told us in flourishing detail of the fight, the skill, and the dramatic finish.

"That boy in the Spad: what a marvelous flyer!"

We all smiled.

Sensing his story was not entirely new to us, he asked, "Do you happen to know him? He's a wonder!"

We introduced him to Avery, who, smiling, extended his hand. Jumping up the Colonel warmly grabbed him.

"I've seen a great many air flights," he said, "but never, never, a more skilful one than yours. Accept my deepest congratulations."

Proudly he showed us the motor and said he had had it running. Two machine guns, the propeller and other parts of the wrecked Fokker were in a corner. Waving his hand at the pile, he told Avery to take whatever he wanted.

With the propeller and one of the machine guns in the car we were ready to leave.

"Well, boys, shoot over some more Hun when you're up this way again," he called.

Assuring him that our next victim would be none less than the Kaiser himself, we went away.

As we were near the front lines we decided to take a sight-seeing trip.

"Which is the way to the Front?" we inquired from an M. P. stationed at a cross road.

"There." He pointed ahead. "But you better not go, they're shelling that road."

Wait, Then Follow

We waited for a few minutes but, seeing no shells explode, thought this fellow was overly cautious; so, disregarding his advice, we went along.

A few hundred feet further the road was blocked. The bodies of two dead Germans made it impossible to pass. We dragged them to one side and were getting back into the car when a shell burst almost at our feet.

Up the road another burst. Turning the car around we started back. Another shell burst in front of us and still another burst near the cross road. The guard, as we sped past him, was nowhere to be seen. What happened? Was he struck?

We wanted to see Belleau Woods where the troops of the second division, against terrific odds and with tremendous loss of life, won undying glory for the Americans.

Arriving at the Bois de Belleau we left the car and walked. The ground was flat. Between the road and the edge of the woods a few bayoneted rifles, butts topped with helmets to mark the place where a soldier had been hastily buried, were thrust into the ground.

We examined different objects. Casually, I lifted a helmet off a rifle butt. Inside, decomposed and full of maggots, was part of a human head . . .

We entered the woods.

The ground, damp, soggy and slimy sloped at an angle which made it difficult to walk. Small trees were shot to pieces. Others, remains of terrific machine gun fire or broken by large shells were naked stumps.

Cartons of biscuits and blankets were strewn everywhere. German machine guns, ammunition, partly filled boxes of hand grenades and other boxes, unopened lay behind piles of rock and larger trees.

The Germans, defending these woods, had not lacked ammunition.

Sodden earth. Depressions, where Germans, flat on their bellies, sprayed the advancing Americans with machine gun fire.

Rifles, slipped from the hands of dying Americans, lay rusting. Not a dead German did we see. The woods were full, full of reminders of our own soldiers who met death in this hellhole.

We came to a trench.

Ten feet long, four feet wide and four feet deep. Our boys dug it. They dug it in an attempt to hold the ground they had won at such a cost. Five rifles—with bayonets fixed and pointing up a hill, lay at its edge. Five Americans—covered with a sprinkle of earth and wet blankets—lay, crumbled, together. They had dug their own graves.

Note From Home

Another body, stiff and discolored, lay on its back. The glassy, hopeless eyes stared into the blue sky. A postal card protruded from the breast pocket of its uniform:

DEAR JOHN:

I have not heard from you for two or three weeks, and am worried. Keep yourself dry and don't catch cold. Write to me soon. Your loving

MOTHER.

God in heaven, what these chaps went through! We, even then, walked with difficulty. How, through a tempest of exploding hand grenades and machine gun bullets, human beings ever advanced up that wooded hill and forced the Germans from their hidden entrenchments is beyond comprehension.

The price they paid is well known. Americans did it!

Emerging from the other side of the woods we came to a large field.

Here was a different story. Bodies of dead Germans and horses were in a reeking mass. Bellies, swollen like balloons, hissed and made rumbling noises. Rifles, portable telephones, helmets and whole packs of personal equipment lay where the Germans left them as they fled from the fighting Yanks.

No dead Americans here—they had fought in the open.

A light breeze blew toward us. The stench was sickening. Holding our noses we skirted the woods, returned to our car and drove back to the aerodrome.

My admiration for those who had "gone over the top" was stronger than ever.

* * *

Regular patrols of two flights a day.

Each lasted from one and a half to two hours. To survive, once across the lines, every sense must be alert. Good air sight meant life.

Tiny black specks, almost indistinguishable, were deadly unless avoided. To insure a return to the aerodrome, surrounding country and landmarks had to be lodged in the memory; anti-aircraft dodged; the skies, in every direction, continually searched.

Each flight was an unsolved problem.

New sensations; new surprises. Not until each phase had been met, encountered and surpassed, not once, but many times, did a pilot become a "veteran."

Flying was automatic; shooting, second nature.

High patrols were not so exhausting. Reaching the cloud strata, the formation, to avoid collisions, would spread out. Then through dense vapor, we climbed.

On several occasions I was first to emerge. Blue, blue sky above; clouds below, waves of yellow light, basking in a fluffy sun-cotton sea.

One by one my comrades would poke their noses through. A point, purple, then sailing silhouettes, dark, clear-cut and beautiful against the whiteness.

New inhabitants in a new world. Far from earthly things. Unseen by pompous anti-aircraft, we assumed formation, headed for the lines and flew along, trailing our shadows.

MRS. SIMS HITS CULBERTSONS AS 'STALLING'

By International News Service

New York, March 28—Mrs. Dorothy Rice Sims, the diminutive firebrand bridge partner of her husband, P. Hal Sims, today charged the Culbertsons—Ely and Josephine—with "stalling."

The Culbertsons are leading by 3250 points in their 150-rubber contract bridge match against the Sims, but Dorothy says it's only because Ely won't give the cards a chance to run.

"Why don't you keep seated and play some cards," Dorothy declared right in the teeth of Culbertson.

"You come late. You stop for tea. You broadcast and declare recesses to hold social court. If we win a couple of rubbers you declare another intermission.

"We came here to play cards. Let's have some card playing."

P. Hal Sims told his wife to pipe down. But she didn't.

"Why don't you play some cards?" she shouted after the disappearing Ely.

Mrs. Sims, to uphold her oratorical thesis, pointed out that the contract for the contest called for six rubbers to be played at every session. There have been five sessions and only 23 rubbers played, seven behind schedule.

"Suspicious"

Mrs. Sims also voiced her suspicions as to the accuracy of the scoring of the aces and kings held to date.

The scoreboard at Crockford's Club, controlled by Culbertson, where the match is being played, records 309 aces held by the Sims tandem to date against 235 garnered by the Culbertsons; and 312 kings held by the Simses versus 292 held by the Culbertsons.

"How do you get that long count?" demanded Dorothy from Ely. "And who's keeping score? Are you counting the ace of spades three times?"

"Now, Dolly," said Ely, soothingly.

The final hand was a little slam in spades, made by Culbertson. It accounted for 1520 points.

Ely laid down the hand after the opening lead and conceded the ace of hearts.

If he had played out the hand he would have made seven spades as the opening lead was a diamond.

The hand follows:

Knitting Needles Halted As B. U. Frowns on Fad

The knitting mania that has swept through Boston University received its first setback today.

By official pronouncement knitting was banned in the class rooms of the college of practical arts and letters.

The fad took a hold on Boston University last week with the opening of a free information knitting clinic at the bookstores. The result was a sale of $75 in yarn the first week.

"Best sellers" among the yarns are cloque for sweaters, germantown for bathing suits and shorts, iceland for sweaters, and crystalaine for dresses.

Most popular of the colors is turquoise blue which the girls use for dresses, sweaters, bathing suits, hats, scarfs, pocketbooks, and shorts.

Incidental to the knitting movement, another group has taken up weaving, producing blankets and shawls.

PROVIDE Girls for Tech FRESHMEN

Take your choice.

A demure Wellesley girl, a dashing Radcliffe undergraduate or something charming in the line of a ravishing Wheaton blond?

Whatever your taste in feminine pulchritude, the Technology dance committee stands ready to gratify the desire of even the humblest who wants to attend the Tech freshman dance on April 5 and cannot find a girl.

A "date bureau" has been set up to care for out-of-town lads who have not met local girls.

RANNY Weeks Given Fox Film Test

By GEORGE HOLLAND

Those two-reel pictures, known to the trade as "shorts" have been getting better lately. Nevertheless, Ranny Weeks' meeting with George Beatty, the good comedian, is funny.

George Holland

The popular Boston band director was in New York last week to make a motion picture test for Fox Pictures. Say I it is about time because Mr. Weeks can sing and is very good looking.

* * *

Ranny encountered Mr. Beatty at luncheon after his test had been made. He told George that he had just finished being tested. Mr. Beatty slapped Mr. Weeks on the back.

"Ranny, old fellah," Mr. Beatty began most mournfully, "I wish you well. But I think you should know what happened to the test they made of me. It was so brutal that they sent it out as a short."

I told this story to Marty Mullin, the Irish half of the M. and P. theaters (Metropolitan, Fenway, Paramount, Modern in Boston) at the Coconaut Grove a few minutes ago. As he laughed and seemed to enjoy it, I do not think I am being fresh in passing it along. Or maybe Mr. Mullin was being polite.

Thomas Mitchell is directing Tallulah Bankhead's new play, "Something Gay," which is scheduled for mid-April at the Plymouth. This lifts Tommy's score to three in the past three months. He played in and directed "Fly Away Home" which opened December 28. He directed "Hollywood Holiday," the Daniels-Lyon-Gallagher comedy which I hear is duplicating its Boston success in Philadelphia, and now comes Tallulah's new vehicle.

Dolores Costello Gets Screen Offers

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Motion Picture Editor Universal Service

Copyright, 1935, by Universal Service

Los Angeles, March 28—John Barrymore, on the high seas, destination unknown to anyone in Hollywood, may be interested to hear that his lovely young wife, Dolores Costello, has had several offers to return to the screen.

Louella O. Parsons

Dolores, with a wisdom rare in a girl so young, has never discussed her matrimonial affairs. Her closest friends have never heard her say one word against John's curious actions nor mention any plans she may have for a legal separation.

She appeared on a Warner Brothers' radio anniversary program a few weeks ago. She looked so beautiful and her voice on the air was a revelation to those who thought the talkies might prove a stumbling block.

Since that time two studios have expressed an interest and it wouldn't surprise me to see her sign a contract with Jack Warner and Hal Wallis. She started at Warners and her entire screen career was spent at this studio.

Carol Ann Beery, who has been Wally's shadow at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios, has finally obtained his permission to play in a picture with her adored daddy. Wally has, in the past, refused to let the winsome little lady become a movie actress although it's the one big thing in the world she craves. Today he consented to let her play the part of Henry Stephenson's granddaughter in "China Seas," a roistering romance of the Orient with Jean Harlow, Clark Gable and Beery as the three leading characters.

* * *

Every few weeks Harry Cohn gets an idea for Ruth Chatterton and pages her wildly all over town. Eventually she will make a picture for the energetic Cohn for she likes his pictures and when they find a suitable story for her she will move in. Right now "A Modern Lady" by Grace Perkins, is under consideration. Grace Perkins, who is Mrs. Fulton Oursler in private life, sent me a copy of her book and it's the story of a self-made real estate woman with plenty of drama and interest.

* * *

Jack Warner has such plans for Rudy Vallee, the crooner and master of ceremonies. When Rudy gets here in June he will find a story with music all ready for him to hear. Of course, no definite plans will be made until it meets with his approval, but it's a story by Harry Sauber with a special Vallee angle, about a would-be playboy. Harry Rubin and Bert Kalmar are writing the music and in the telling it sounds okayoke.

Chatter in Hollywood: Katie Hepburn has bought herself a new car, and what a car! A station wagon, bright yellow, and is she having fun with the new toy? She whizzed through the gate at RKO a mile a minute, past gatemen and attendants and startled employes. On her heels came a police car with four indignant officers. No respecter of persons, I might add, for they handed Katie a ticket for speeding. Katie's boy friend, Leland Hayward, last week, was voted the most devastating youth with the women in Hollywood. The girls all fall, the stars I mean, all fall for him.

I had an advance glimpse of some of the frocks Marion Davies will wear in "Page Miss Glory" and my admiration for Orry Kelly, the designer, has increased. Any woman who likes clothes—and aren't we all clothes conscious—will want to copy the white number which Orry is calling "La Davies." He is so intrigued with planning frocks for Marion that he is concentrating on the Davies clothes and turning over the other Warner Brothers styles to Howard Greer, who also has ideas. I spent the afternoon with Marion while she was testing for hair-dress, clothes, etc., and it was interesting to watch the various phases of makeup, costumes, etc.

Snapshots of Hollywood

This JUNE KNIGHT-TOMMY LEE romance is getting to be a habit; they dined together again; LAWRENCE GRAY off for a holiday in Mexico via the air; IRVING ASHER here with his attractive wife, LAURA LA PLANTE; he is conferring with JACK WARNER; BABE WARBURTON, Philadelphia socialite who opened a hat shop with RITA KAUFMAN, now being sought for the movies; FRED PERRY with MARIAN MARSH, entertaining his tennis adversary FRANK SHIELDS and a large party of tennis players and enthusiasts after the matches.

A long wire from STEPIN FETCHIT from Houston; STEPIN says he did a little flying and has now become "air-minded"; BARBARA KENT boasts of the first sun tan of the season; poor WARNER BAXTER, who never wore a wig in his life, getting ribbed over a story that he lost his wig; the "Follies" are paging our JIMMIE GLEASON for a New York show; KAY FRANCIS, coffee cup in hand, dashing to the hairdresser's on the Warner lot, to get herself beautified; wedding bells are to ring for BRYANT WASHBURN, Jr., and LONA ANDRE; seems only yesterday BRYANT'S daddy married pretty MABEL FORREST in Chicago; time certainly do fugit.

ARTHUR LAKE, juvenile actor, has turned writer and we are informed he is doing all right at Universal Studios; MRS. PHYLLIS DANIELS and MRS. W. H. HOWARD dashing to New York to the bedside of NAN HOWARD'S sister; PHYLLIS will see her daughter, BEBE, and her granddaughter, BARBARA BEBE while she is in New York. That's all today. See you tomorrow!

A Personality—Screen, Stage And Radio

Jack Benny, who keeps busy and popular on the radio, stage and screen, comes to the Metropolitan tomorrow, in person, with Mary Livingston.

New Bill at Bowdoin

Film attractions at the Bowdoin Square are "Biography of a Bachelor Girl," with Ann Harding and Robert Montgomery in leading roles, and "Red Hot Tires," featuring Lyle Talbot, Mary Astor, and Frankie Darrow.

Five acts of RKO vaudeville are on the Bowdoin program.

Romantic Melody

Schubert's Life Vividly Portrayed on Screen

By JOYCE DANA

No other composer has been so immortalized in song and story and on stage and screen as Franz Schubert.

His romantic life, in its most idealistic and sympathetic presentation is "Unfinished Symphony," now on the screen at the Fine Arts.

Schubert's ruling passion was melody, and his glorious music rings through the film. The Vienna Philharmonic provides the orchestral background, playing the B minor Symphony; the Vienna Choir Boys as students in Schubert's school-room, sing "Rose Among the Heather."

Marta Eggert, with a delightful, clear soprano, sings the passionately beautiful "Serenade," and there are choruses from the Vienna state opera, and the famous Gypsy band, Gyula Howath. One of its most beautiful moments shows how the "Ave Maria" was inspired.

Indeed, it's a music festival of the finest, interwoven with one of the world's most poetic romances.

Schubert's tragic love for Caroline, Countess of Esterhazy, and his idyllic and inspiring companionship with Emmie, sweet and gentle daughter of a Vienna pawnbroker have been filmed with tender solicitude. And no finer choice could have been made than Hans Jaray for the shy and diffident genius whose music holds some of the lyric gems of the ages.

Helen Chandler, fragile and exquisite, gives a touching performance as the neglected little girl who adored Schubert throughout his brief life.

Historically, Schubert's failure to complete the B minor Symphony is unrecorded. In this delightful and quite plausible version we see the heartbroken composer tearing the final pages to shreds following Caroline's marriage. This symphony, like his love, shall remain forever unfinished.

At Scollay

Tomorrow's new program at the Scollay Square features Warner Brothers latest big musical spectacle, "Gold Diggers of 1935."

Dick Powell and Gloria Stuart have the romantic leads in the lavish production and Adolphe Menjou, Alice Brady, Glenda Farrell and Frank McHugh head the supporting cast.

On the same program is "A Shot in the Dark," starring Charles Farrell, which is being own for the first time in Boston.

Charles Hackett in Opera Cast

Mr. Charles Hackett will sing in "Traviata" on next Tuesday evening with the Metropolitan Opera Company at the Boston Opera House.

The distinguished star will replace Mr. Richard Crooks, who has just undergone a serious operation and will be unable to appear here.

Benny Tops Met Parade

The arrival of Jack Benny to head the new stage show tomorrow inaugurates a parade of big names at the Metropolitan.

George Olson and Ethel Shutta, Isham Jones and his orchestra, and Rudy Vallee and his Connecticut Yankees are scheduled to take their turn behind the Met footlights in the very near future.

In the meantime the engaging Mr. Benny, with Mary Livingston and a large company of radio, screen and stage favorites, will present a new musical revue for the coming week.

The film attraction at the Met will star Claudette Colbert, winner of the Academy award for the best screen performance of 1934, in "Private Worlds."

The picture is based on the best-seller by Phyllis Bottome, and in the supporting cast are Charles Boyer, Joan Bennett and Joel McCrea.

At Loew's State two star Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer productions are billed for the week beginning tomorrow.

"Vanessa," Hugh Walpole's romantic drama laid in London and the Cumberland countryside, brings Helen Hayes to her latest star role. Robert Montgomery plays opposite Miss Hayes.

An excellent cast features May Robson as the immortal Judith Paris.

"The Casino Murder Case," companion picture on the State program is the third of the Philo Vance portrayals.

Rosalind Russell plays her first leading role on the screen in the film.

Don Costello headlines the new vaudeville bill tomorrow at Loew's Orpheum.

Other Orpheum headliners are Mae Usher in "Lyrics of Life," and a comedy trio, Tommy Mack, Frank Hearst and Eddie Young.

On the screen will be "The Wedding Night," King Vidor's picture with Anna Sten and Gary Cooper in star roles. Ralph Bellamy, Helen Vinson and Siegfried Rumann appear in the cast.

Final Music Treat for Children

Saturday afternoon brings to a conclusion the season of Symphony Hall's popular "Varieties" for young people, with the presentation of scenes from "A Midsummer's Night's Dream."

The performance is at 2.30, and the production is to be an elaborate one, with dances, orchestra, singing and acting from the picturesque and elfin Shakespeare comedy.

Colette Humphrey, Miriam Catheron, Ernest Deacon and Milton Parsons will be the leading players, and as an accompaniment to the dramatic action, Arthur Fiedler will lead an orchestra in Mendelssohn's "Midsummer Night's Dream" music.

A women's chorus of Cecilia Society singers will be another of the play's attractions.

* * *

Portions of "Khovanstchina," the opera which occupied Moussorgsky during the last years of his life, will be presented in part in concert at the Symphony Orchestra concerts tomorrow afternoon and Saturday evening.

The prelude and entire third act will be presented with chorus and soloists. Members of the Russian Opera Company appearing with the orchestra will be Nadine Fedora, Dora Boshoer, Stepan Slepoushkin, Alexis Tcherkasky and Ivan Ivantzoff. The choral parts will be sung by the Cecilia Society.

Stories of the Opera

That readers of the Boston Evening American may know the stories of the operas to be presented by the Metropolitan Opera Company at the Boston Opera House during the week of April 1, Ann Ames of this newspaper has prepared and will publish a brief outline of each of the eight operas in the order in which they will be presented. This is the sixth of the series.

"The Mastersingers of Nuremberg"

In the week's repertoire to be presented here by the Metropolitan Opera Company, Wagner's "The Mastersingers of Nuremberg" is the only one which has an entirely happy story.

The great German composer was an intense and serious man, yet singularly enough it was while he was besieged with personal and political troubles in 1861 that he created his "comedy."

The inspiration for the libretto came from the master singers of the old workers' guilds, which in medieval times held great singing contests throughout Germany.

FAILS IN TEST

Walter, a young knight, has fallen in love with Eva, daughter of a wealthy Nuremberg goldsmith, Pogner. This lovely creature has been promised as a bride to the winner of the impending song contest.

The enamored Walter resolves at once to become a competitor, and is instructed by the apprentice, David, as to the pedantic mysteries and quaint rules for contestants.

At the preliminary tests, however, the ugly and cantakerous Beckmesser, who aspires to Eva's hand, is unfortunately chosen as critic, and poor Walter's song is so severely condemned that he is promptly rejected.

Only Hans Sachs, poet-cobbler, pleads for the young singer, but in vain.

The second act discloses a street in Nuremberg. Pogner's house is at the right and Sach's home and workshop at the left. A crowd of merry young people are taunting David, the apprentice, who is deeply in love with Magdalena, Eva's chaperone.

Eva has resolved to elope with her lover, and engages the sympathy of the wise Hans Sachs. When the ludicrous Beckmesser comes to serenade Eva, Hans hammers away at a shoe and sings humorous songs to drown out the voice of the angry suitor.

A SEVERE BEATING

To carry out her elopement plans, Eva has changed into Magdalena's clothes, while her chaperone sits at the window, presumably listening to Beckmesser's love song.

David appears and [illegible] is his sweetheart at the window, in a fit of jealous rage gives Beckmesser a severe beating. A general street brawl follows, until the watchman's horn dispels the crowd.

* * *

In the final act Sachs listens to Walter's prize song while he cobbles. Sachs is convinced of its beauty and merit, and notes it down while Walter sings.

Believing it to be an original work by Sachs, the crafty Beckmesser steals it, hoping it will win for him the prize and the bride.

A meadow with the towers of Nuremberg in the distance is the settnig of the next scene. There is singing and dancing, with comic choruses of shoemakers, tailors and bakers.

WEALTH OF LAUREL

At the prize contest, Beckmesser attempts to sing the stolen song, but since he can neither understand nor remember it, his grotesque efforts arouse nothing but derisive laughter.

The kindly Sachs suggests that Walter sing the same song. At its conclusion, while the crowd is still singing its approbation, he kneels at Eva's feet, and the wreath of laurel and myrtle leaves is placed upon his brow.

The famous critic, Ernest Newman, writes of this opera, "The Mastersingers is, and will probably long remain, the greatest of all comedies in music, if indeed "comedy" is the correct word to apply to an opera that in addition to its humorous episodes, contains so much that is the quintessence of serious beauty, of profund philosophy, and of mellow wisdom."

NECK BROKEN

Hikes Across U. S.

Portland, Me., March 28 (AP)—A homeless youth who hitchhiked from Fort Worth, Tex., to Portland with a broken neck was receiving medical aid in a local hospital today.

He told Federal Transient Director David D. Needleman he was Edward Mirestine, 23, and that he came here to get as far away as possible from a married sister in Fort Worth who regarded him as being an expense to her after he broke his neck in an auto accident. Later he admitted he made the story up. When Mirestine's condition warrants he will be sent back to Fort Worth.

Niven Denies Romance

"Bad Boy" Can't Wed Countess of Warwick

By International News Service

Hollywood, March 28 — "Romance? Don't be silly; I grew up with the girl. And besides, she's married!"

Thus David Niven, 26, of Kirriemuir, Scotland, "bad boy of England," who "kidded" his way into the movies recently and already has become a Hollywood guide for visiting celebrities, disposed of a "romantic rumor" as he started in his automobile toward an airport to greet Rose, Countess of Warwick, who arrives [illegible] Hollywood as house guest of Adrienne Ames and her husband, Bruce Cabot.

Countess of Warwick

"And the countess is not coming to take a film test," said Niven. "She's just here to look over Hollywood."

Niven, internationally known yachtsman, son of a distinguished British general and friend of Fred Astair, won a commission in the Highland light infantry when he was 19.

COLLEEN HOUSE TO AID CRIPPLED

By Universal Service

Hollywood, March 28—Fairyland was moving from southern California toward New York.

Colleen Moore's "Enchanted Castle," a $435,000 doll house, was dismantled and sent by express from Glendale, Cal., workshops to the Eastern city where Mrs. James Roosevelt, mother of the President, will act as patroness in the first exhibition of the 11-room, 15-foot high gold and diamond studded "toy."

Miss Moore, who left by train for New York, said she expects to raise a million dollars for crippled children by taking the home on a nationwide and possibly a world tour.

With electric lights and running water, rooms of the dream castle represent childhood legends—Captain Kidd, Ali Baba, Aladdin, Gulliver, Robinson Cruse, Little Red Riding Hood and many others.

Doctors O. K. Alyce's Face

No Paralysis Results; Wind Shuts Her In

By Associated Press

Fall River, March 28—A cold wind today cancelled Alyce Jane McHenry's morning visit to the open air sun porch.

The 19-year-old Omaha girl continued her rapid convalescence from a delicate operation at Truesdale Hospital to correct the misplaced organs in her stomach.

Her doctors reported her temperature was normal and that she ate a good breakfast.

Another indication that she was progressing properly was the announcement that her aunt, Mrs. Loring Nelson, had returned to her home in Nebraska.

Doctors denied rumors that the left side of Alyce's face and her left arm were temporarily paralyzed.

They explained that during the operation a 50 per cent solution of alcohol was injected to keep Alyce's diaphragm motionless during the operative period and during the convalescence.

This was necessary, the doctors said, to insure proper healing, but did not affect the face or arm.

AUSTEN LAKE on

Sport's Lowest Level, the Dance Walkathon

AMONG THE LOW FORMS of athletic endeavor, like husband-calling for range and clarity, or heel-and-toe racing, in which the athlete wiggles his torso in a manner to suggest that he has thistles in his pants which he is wishful to twitch loose, I will mention the Walkathon, which now being contested at Moseley's-on-the-Charles.

Austen Lake

This is a lunatic importation from Florida, where it had its beginnings during the money madness when people stormed down from the North pining for sillier things to see.

It consists of underbright couples of high school age and deluded adults shuffling and teetering around a postage stamp floor to the sour blurts of horn music, until they flop, or go to clawing each other in sheer hysteria at having to look at the same faces 24 hours a day for weeks at a time.

* * *

The Dance Boss, Lord of Disrepute

THE WALKATHON has a direct customer appeal, to which, never-go-homes, all-night-sitters, bottle-nippers, dozers and sight-snoopers come to enjoy the red-rimmed eyes and nervous spasms of the girl and boy athletes.

So, as the Walkathon goes toward the later stages of exhaustion and the peaked, shabby couples stir more sluggishly, the paid attendance rises in proportion.

These affairs are hugely profitable to the promoter, who is usually fat, florid and crusty with a voice like a blacksmith's rasp.

The prize money is small and the hall is rented on a percentage of the take. And the boss goes from one town to another, the calendar around, towing most of his underbright couples along, to shuffle and teeter them some more.

In winter you will find the dance-boss in Florida playing the Gulf towns, where his hollow-eyed dance-people are billed as teams from the nearby region for the sake of local pride.

There will be a phony nurse in a hospital uniform sitting around with a kit of stimulants, and separate rest-wards for males and females to lay their aching bones for 15 minutes in each hour.

* * *

I HAVE SPENT HOURS in the barefoot towns of the South during the baseball training seasons, watching these scrawny kids weave and shuttle in a competition to stay awake and, technically, in motion.

I recall a skinny team billed as Mickey and Maggie Mallory. She was a spindle-shanked girl with a mop of moist, stringy hair, scoops in her cheeks and a hard chest bark. He was lean with a pinched, fox-terrier face of oily indoor brown.

Pensacola being a dull town after dark, the newsmen came to know the dance-athletes by name, and we used to chat with Mickey and Maggie while they slupped up tepid pea-broth and munched hardtack during the feeding hour.

They had a baby, Maggie said, in a charity home in New Orleans.

And next year, while covering the Braves, I saw the same Walkathon troupe grinding away in a tumbledown pavilion on the outskirts of St. Petersburg.

The floor about the arena was strewn with litter, including the breakage of flasks. Unattached ladies roved the premises, ogling quarrelsome characters who wished to be fought with.

This time Mickey was shuffling a thick-set girl with stumpy, bare legs, a deep bosom and wild brown eyes.

I asked Mickey about Maggie, as the couple swayed and foot-fidgeted, and he said, in his soft, back-country speech, that Maggie had died six months since.

"She was a lunger," he explained. "An' anyway she dint haive the laigs fo' this heuh game."

Lefty's Trial Flight

ALL THIS SPRING, while the rest of the less privileged Red Sox steamed and galloped, Lefty Grove has oiled his pitching shoulder with slow, indulgent lobs. He tossed soft, lazy pitches to his catchers and spent hours on the rubbing table while Trainer Roland Logan kneaded his muscles with perfumed salves.

He would pitch, he announced, when he thought his arm was ready and not a minute before. There was no resentment on Manager Joe Cronin's part over this, because Joe was content to let Lefty follow his own training program.

So tomorrow, more than a month after Lefty lobbed his first pitch in winter training, he will make an initial trial flight against the Phillies. Being a simple, suspicious and sensitive type, much depends on this first attempt, which will tend to crystallize the state of mind with which Lefty faces the season ahead.

Because, I believe, that Lefty's trouble last year was as much mental as physical and that his wayward control and lack of power were due mainly to mistrust and fear of letting loose the full sweep of his arm.

At least, most of the Red Sox' fortunes in the year ahead hang from the same shoulder joint where Lefty's length of pitching muscle, bone and gristle hangs.

Sport's Sewing Circle

YOUR PROFESSIONAL HOCKEY PLAYER of the Shore, Thompson and Siebert type stomachs more punishment uncomplainingly than any other vocational athlete in any line of sport.

The skate cut that Thompson received in the second cup game with the Maple Leafs would have shelved a baseball or football player for weeks.

Yet Tiny submitted to being crocheted with a surgical needle between the periods and came out to stand the Toronto shelling all over again.

Only fortitude comparable with these hockey pros is that of the six-day bicycle churners, most of whom are marked with large, purplish spider scars on their legs, jaws and body where they have been hemstitched and put back into circulation.

The two human needle cushions of sport are Eddie Shore and Reggie McNamara, whose flesh, combined, has been sewn with enough stitches to make a coat, vest and two pairs of pants.

Clapper Hurt, Bruins Riddled by Injuries

Toronto, Ont., March 28—Boston Bruins' stock was decidedly bearish today, only hours before tonight's first game on Toronto ice and the third of the championship playoff series with the Maple Leafs.

Injuries the Bruins' keymen, particularly Dit Clapper, Babe Seibert, Eddie Shore and Tiny Thompson, and the lack of capable reserves, were the contributing factors which hammered down the Boston price.

Less than 36 hours ago the Bostons were favorites to lift the series. They had the opening game safely tucked away.

They showed adeptness in [illegible] ing Charlie Conacher, Harvey Jackson, Joe Primeau, Frank Finnigan, Bill Thoms, King Clancy and all the other dynamic aces of the Toronto fold.

But the decisive manner in which the Leafs finally registered in the second game and the [illegible] that victory engendered, [illegible] today's market value of the Leafs sky high.

SELLOUT

Thus the battered Bruins find themselves short enders at no better than 10 to 5 for both tonight's game and the series.

Boston which needs offer no apologies for the manner in which it backs its Bruins must doff its chapeau to the Maple Leafs cohorts.

This Dominion city, basking in mid-summer sunshine on the beautiful shores of Lake Ontario, is hockey ravenous. The Maple Leaf Gardens have been sold out for both tonight's and Saturday games since early Monday morning.

Capacity houses of 14,500 including standees of some 1500, are assured. Thousands more are clamoring for tickets.

Whereas two days ago, the Bruins' problem was Babe Seibert, star defenseman, today it is Clapper.

ROBERTSON TITLE THREAT

Michigan Star Likely to Upset Medica

FACES CHAMPS IN THREE RACES

By Bob Ahearn

Although overshadowed by the Jack Medica-Jimmy Gilhula rivalry, Tex Robertson, University of Michigan's star merman, is likely to walk off with titular honors in the National Collegiate A. A. swimming championships, which start at the Harvard pool tomorrow afternoon.

Labeled the dark horse of the 12th annual event, Robertson may upset the much heralded Medica and Gilhula when all three match strides in the 220, 440-yard and 1500-meter free style events.

Matt Mann, Michigan mentor, reports Robertson has been showing some fine form in recent time trials. Mann formerly was instructor at the Brookline Swimming Association.

Robertson has put together times of 2 minutes 12 seconds in the 220, 4 minutes 42 seconds in the 440, and 19 minutes 20 seconds in the 1500 meter free style. This does not match Gilhula's and Medica's records but Mann is confident his pupil will reach his peak in the nationals.

Michigan's team of 13 swimmers was to work out today at the Holyoke Street pool at Harvard. Michigan is Big Ten champion, a title it has held for the past five years.

It will be favored to take the team championships, with Yale likely to be the most serious contender.

SPLASHES

Runyan Has Perfect Round

By Universal Service

Pinehurst, N. C., March 28—Three golfers of widely contrasting physical appearance were leading the pack of [illegible] players in the North and South open golf championship, moving into its second 18-hole round today.

Pint-sized Paul Runyan of New York was out in front with a 65, 7 under par, a round which he described as "The best single round of shot making I ever have played in my life."

Three strokes back were tall, slender Ray Mangrum of Los Angeles and solid, heavy-set Felix Serafin of Scranton, Pa.

A few shots back of them, well within striking distance, were such stars as Willie Macfarlane, Craig Wood, Denny Shute, Ky Laffoon, Harry Cooper, Clarence Clark, Mike Turnesa, Byron Nelson, Joe Ezar, Tony Manero and Sam Parks.

Tommy Armour, Walter Hagen and Joe Turnesa fell back with 73s while Johnny Golden shot himself fairly well out of the running with 79.

Dallas—King Levinsky, 202, Chicago, awarded decision over Babe Hunt, 196, Ponca City, Okla., in slashing 10 rounder.

Barcelona, Spain—Freddie Miller, Cincinnati, outclassed Luigi Quadrini, Italy, 10 rounds, non-title bout.

RHODY Team STRONG

HAS EIGHT CHAMPS

Eight state champions from Rhode Island should be the most formidable contenders local boys will have to compete against when the New England amateur boxing championships are settled Monday night at the Boston Arena.

The entrants from Rhode Island include Albert Mancini, 112-pound champion of the state and also New England junior titlist, Tony Costa, 118 pounds, Tony Vento, 126 pounds, Mickey Bicki, 135 pounds, Ralph Zanelli, 147 pounds, Walter Marczyk, 160 pounds, and Hendrick Van Leesten, heavyweight.

Costa, Vento and especially Zanelli are well known here but Van Leesten comes as a comparative stranger.

However, he is said to be the greatest heavyweight developed around Providence in years.

Entries are pouring in from every section of New England. The entire list of Merrimack Valley champions, from the Lawrence section, is entered.

They include Tom Crowley of Lowell, 112 pounds; Mike DiPrima, Fitchburg, 118 pounds; Frankie Pelczarski, Manchester, N. H., 126 pounds; Charles Carroll, Lowell, 135 pounds; Wilfred Despres, Lawrence, 147 pounds, and Dan Leo, Fitchburg, 160 pounds.

A light heavyweight and heavyweight from this section will be named later.

Sophs Star at B. C.

Fallon, Morris, Jobin, Cash Make Grade

The sophomores out for Coach Frank McCrehan's Boston College nine are making a great fight for varsity berths this spring.

Charlie Fallon, Tom Morris, Jim Jobin and Bob Cash are the chief threats to the veteran players for the positions of catcher, shortstop, third base and a member of the pitching staff respectively.

Fallon is a former all-scholastic catcher from B. C. High, and has the inside track for the backstop berth if his hitting is up to his receiving.

Morris is a former English High all-scholastic and he has been showing so well at the Armory that he, too, will take a lot of beating for shortstop post.

Jobin is a product of Hudson and B. C. High. He has played on the Hudson town team for years and has all that is needed for the varsity in Coach McCrehan's opinion.

Cash is the best of the sophomore hurlers and looms as an aid to McCrehan's four veteran twirlers.

Olympics to Meet Ruths for Title

Chicago, March 28—Boston Olympics will meet the Baby Ruth sextet of this city in the national amateur hockey finals.

The series will be played in two games, the first in Madison Square Garden, New York, next Sunday and the second in Chicago Stadium, April 3.

The Baby Ruths qualified for the finals by defeating the Boston Store, another Chicago team, 4 to 0, in the Western final here.

Pinehurst, N. C., March 28—Deborah Verry of Worcester won the Silver Foils Golf Society championship here with a [illegible] of 160.

Sonny Back

Meets McLeod in Arena Match

Gus Sonnenberg, the Babe Ruth of wrestling, returns to Boston next Wednesday night to meet Farmer George McLeod in the feature of Alex MacLean's show at the Arena.

Sonnenberg, it is expected, will arrive in Boston later this week. On his tour of Australia and New Zealand Dynamite Gus won 40 out of 42 matches. He's gunning for Ed Don George and the championship he once held.

RUKEYSER SAYS

Recovery Can Be Retaken

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER

(Copyright, 1935, by Universal Service.)

New York, March 28—In its present mood, the business public is too tolerant toward the prophets of doom.

Ever since the New Deal got under way extreme pessimists have been battering away at the foundations of confidence by making predictions which have not been fulfilled. [illegible] generally overlooked.

As a matter of fact, despite the prevailing tangles and cross currents recovery can be recaptured [illegible] scrap mistaken experiments and faith destroying policies.

With such a modification of the [illegible] program and a [illegible] forces, making for returning prosperity, will gain the saddle. The [illegible] contribution which government can make is to help re-establish economic balance.

[illegible] has for so long been in vogue that men are over[illegible] for more years in business.

Chief executives should concentrate in the next month or two on singling out meritorious employes and spurring them on to better achievements.

It should not be forgotten that among the deflated executives of the current period are many of the successful leaders of tomorrow.

Better economic circumstances will create new opportunities for [illegible]

This generalization is supported by a depression time success story.

A partner in an underwear concern whose line was fast becoming [illegible] was squeezed out by his associates. At the time, this seemed calamitous, but it was a boon in disguise.

The ousted partner set up an equity receivership and thus salvaged [illegible] they were really seeking to disguise their efforts to give him charity.

But the beneficiary of their plans took the opportunity seriously, and during the depression period expanded sales ten-fold, achieving a [illegible]

Once the creative minds in business return to the normal job of seeking to develop better products for less money, they will be expanding economic activity.

N.E. Business Conditions Are Irregular

The First National Bank of Boston observes today in its New England letter that business conditions are irregular, with only a few lines showing improvement.

Sentiment continues to be very conservative in view of the many economic and political cross-currents both here and abroad.

Wool goods business is found to have been brisk, with prices firm. A very satisfactory volume of orders for fall lines is coming in. The statistical position of raw wool is considered favorable, with trading more active, prices firm here and abroad and stocks not burdensome.

The cotton goods market is dull and prices are lower. As a result of the accumulation of stocks, a general policy of curtailment is being discussed by members of the trade. Most mills are operating at a very narrow margin of profit or at a loss.

Shoe production in February, according to preliminary estimates, was about 10 per cent below the preceding month and approximately the same percentage under February of last year.

Orders have not come up to expectations. Shoe prices are irregular. Retail sales, however, have been well maintained and the trade looks forward to a good volume of Easter business.

Retail trade, while showing gains over a year ago has not been as good as was earlier anticipated.

Department store sales for the country as a whole in February were 5 per cent over the corresponding period a year ago, while sales in the New England territory increased by 3 per cent.

Reflecting improvement in the farm situation, mail order sales last month were nearly 6 per cent above February, 1934.

The sharp advance in prices of foodstuffs, the bank letter reports, is having a retarding influence upon consumer buying.

Retail food prices in February were about 13 per cent above a year ago and approximately 35 per cent over the low point in 1933.

The cost of food constitutes more than one-third of the average budget and a much larger proportion for those in the lowest income classes.

Some signs of buyers' resistance to the higher prices are in evidence and goods are accumulating in dealers' hands.

The sharp advance in food prices imposes an unusual strain upon those subsisting on depleted earnings or living off past savings as well as constituting a drain upon the public treasury in view of the millions of persons on relief.

BROKERS Hold Bearish VIEWS

Failure of the market to develop broader rallying power on recent occasions has left the Street preponderantly bearish on the immediate outlook.

Some of the liquidation now in progress is understood to represent disappointment in important circles over the action of prices the last few days.

These interests had anticipated at least a rebound of technical proportions following the spurt in utilities late last week.

A leading broker quite accurately described prevailing sentiment in the remark yesterday that the will to trade exists, but the spirit is lacking.

His view fitting in pretty well with a majority of Wall Street opinion was that the current uncertainties serve only further to irritate already badly jangled nerves.

Finding so much at home and abroad in a state of flux, this commentator hardly expected the markets to display much confidence.

BIG CURB Mart Features BRISK RUNUP

New York, March 28 (AP)—Moderate improvement in nonferrous metals together with a brisk runup in some of the specialties, featured curb market trading today.

Bunker Hill & Sullivan, Lake Shore mines and Pioneer Gold were among other mining shares in demand at higher levels and Great Atlantic & Pacific led the specialties with a 2-point gain.

Utilities were neglected and showed little change. Creole Petroleum was the most active of the oil shares and gained fractionally.

Small losses occurred in Swift & Co. and Pepperell.

Starrett Corp.

Starrett Corp. and wholly owned domestic subsidiaries report for year ended Dec. 31, 1934, net loss of $128,648 after taxes, depreciation, amortization and interest on 5 per cent bonds of Starrett Investing Corp. but exclusive of profit and loss credits, against net loss of $1,6[illegible]836 in 1933.

FAVOR

Call of Remaining Liberties

By Associated Press

Washington, March 28—Treasury officials look with favor, informed sources believe, on the idea of calling in soon the remaining portion of the Fourth Liberty 4¼ per cent bonds. This would wind up such long-term bond refinancing until 1940.

Involved in the operation, if it takes place, would be bonds amounting to about $1,300,000,000. They could be called April 15 for redemption six months later.

A treasury offer to exchange [illegible] bonds for these securities would be a move to retire the last of the war time bond issues. It would clear the field of all bonds which can be called before the spring of 1940.

Officials are inclined to favor the step for two main reasons. The first is the saving that would result to the treasury from lowering the interest rate.

Secondly, it would further reduce the number of outstanding bonds which contain the gold clause, promising payment in gold or its equivalent.

The gold clause bonds are regarded in some quarters as a potential source of trouble for the administration's monetary policies as long as they remain in circulation.

In its celebrated gold decisions, the Supreme Court ruled that Congress had no right to nullify the gold payment clause in government obligations.

It said, however, that a bondholder who sought to collect gold or its equivalent in devalued currency for his securities had not shown that he suffered any damage as a result of gold clause abrogation.

This led to speculation as to the possibility that owners of government bonds containing the gold clause might bring new suits and endeavor to establish damage.

The Treasury's right to refinance gold clause bonds prior to maturity without redeeming them in gold or its equivalent has been challenged in a suit filed in the Court of Claims by Robert A. Taft, son of the former President.

A total of $1,875,[illegible] of the Fourth Liberties is to be retired on April 15 through a refunding operation which offers 20-25 year bonds bearing [illegible] per cent in exchange.

The books on the exchange closed last night, with officials calculating that about $1,200,000,000 had been exchanged. The remainder will be paid off in cash.

Notebook: Thumbing through the actual and possible news developments on rails reduces the problem to three things . . . Will the rate increase asked of the I. C. C. be granted? Will the Supreme Court uphold the contention of rail operators that the Pension Act is unconstitutional? Will traffic show any improvement? An affirmative answer to any one will be bullish . . . For the simple and fundamental reason it will mean widening the gap between operating costs and operating income . . . But either of the first plus the last will be excellent assurance the rails have found better days.

Shorts: The industrial group is acting as though it did not want to follow the rails downward . . . Utilities are behaving so well that it is hard to recognize them on the tape . . . Consolidated Gas could make 21 plus before a technical correction . . . Atchison made the middle 30's as we forecast here many weeks ago . . . Now to see if the rest of it comes true . . . A long term base enabling a good rally . . . To be safe we suppose we should allow for a price slightly under 35.

DECLINE of Spiegel May CONTINUES

Wall Street attached an air of mystery to the continued decline in Spiegel May Stern which carried the price 15 points under last week's high point.

Such a break in so short a time calls for more adequate explanation than pure speculation.

The stock has attracted quite an extensive small speculative following following news of an increase in authorized capital stock of [illegible] shares several weeks ago.

The company however has [illegible] of the disposition of its plans with the additional stock.

HIGH SCHOOL TRAGEDY

By Maxine Canty

Bruce Upheld by Julie

SYNOPSIS

Julie Martin, at 17, becomes an "inside" observer of the police investigation of the murder of her former French teacher, the pretty Constance Sinclair, who had been shot dead in her apartment by a party thus far unknown.

Julie is on the "inside" because after school [illegible] office assistant to Principal Perkins and the latter has [illegible] her as stenographer for Police Inspector O'Brien, who is busy examining suspects and others.

Among those questioned [illegible] wanted for [illegible] herself and her [illegible] Ward who was [illegible] she returned a pen [illegible] a few [illegible] before the tragedy. [illegible] Wright, [illegible] who had [illegible] Inspector [illegible] was missing since her death; Bruce Lloyd, her former fiance, who refuses to say where he was on the murder night, and George Carrington, also reported to be a former suitor.

Dicky Ward is jealous of the handsome Bruce Lloyd who is invited to the Martin home for dinner, immediately after which all present are stirred by the news that Hyms the [illegible] has been found [illegible].

The Oriental tells the police that he discovered Miss Sinclair dead when he called to ask her to use her influence so he could keep his job.

He said he approached her door twice that night but did not try to enter because she had visitors. The third time, she did not answer his knock so he opened the unlocked door and fled the tragic scene in a panic of fear over being suspected.

He was locked up pending further inquiries.

Bruce Lloyd avoids arrest by agreeing to stay at the home of his counsel, Attorney Martin, who stuns his daughter Julie by remarking to her mother that "this nice young man," as Mrs. Martin terms him, did phone Miss Sinclair the day before she was murdered.

The Telephone Call

CHAPTER X

He did not remember whether Miss Sinclair was holding a fountain pen or not. He had heard no unusual noise previous to his call upon her.

The idea that the murderer might have been there just before he arrived, or even might have been concealing himself (or herself) in the apartment during his few moments there served to frighten him.

Two bits of information were established. She was dead by 9:30. The other was that Hyms was sure he had left the door half ajar.

Yet it was closed when the police arrived. The question [illegible] uppermost in the minds was: Who had closed that door?

* * *

The family did not lose [illegible] opportunity to discuss the [illegible] angles of the case brought up by Hyms' testimony. [illegible] was getting so upset a [illegible] over the whole affair that Mother forbade any talk about it.

Dad and I knew [illegible] too. We had a few [illegible] ever after Allan went to the library the evening following Bruce's visit. Dad told us then that Mr. Lloyd was [illegible].

"I think he will be [illegible] for a while. The Inspector is [illegible] rather worked up over this case because it has been so puzzling. He has determined to leave [illegible] every possibility that turns up. Right now he is hot on Lloyd's trail, and he has [illegible] of information. In fact I think he would like to keep him in jail."

"Why, Dad! They can't, can they?"

"Well, legal technicalities are flexible things [illegible] could. But O'Brien [illegible] mised by agreeing that I [illegible] ask Lloyd to [illegible] for a few days. An officer [illegible] with him constantly [illegible] I think the young man [illegible] invitation is [illegible] mand."

So that was [illegible] Mother cleaned house so [illegible] day. Needless to say I was thrilled.

I considered that I was surely getting the breaks [illegible] what with working for the Inspector on the one hand and having Bruce Lloyd right in our house on the other.

I couldn't help giggling over what Dicky would say when he found it out.

Then another idea struck me that wasn't so [illegible]. Suppose the Inspector asked me to spy on Bruce!

I felt positively ill when I thought about it. How could I? On the other hand, I couldn't betray my trust.

The struggle between my conscience and my emotion grew so strong that I forgot Dad was telling us inside news. I came to in time to hear Mother say, "He seems to be such a nice young man."

"Even nice young men make telephone calls, Frederick."

"But not to girls who are murdered the next night."

Dad went on: "Well, anyway, this nice young man certainly telephoned Miss Sinclair from Sacramento on October 19th. She must have been in class when the call came to the school that morning, for he did not reach her. What [illegible]

[illegible]

"Mother Is Right"

"Well," said Mother [illegible] I should [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

Real Love Story

[illegible]

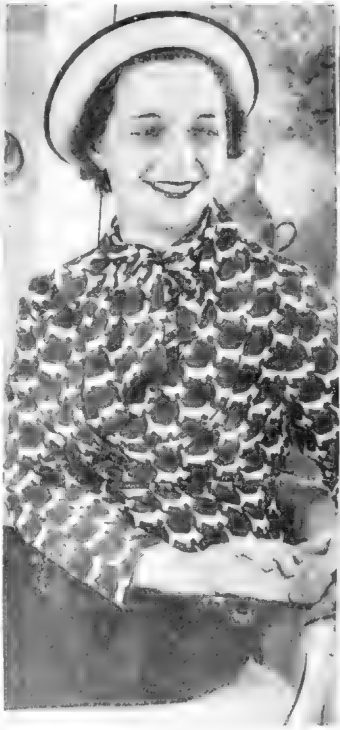
[illegible] the most charming [illegible] Mother and Dad were equally [illegible] I don't believe any one of us had any emotion about [illegible] of affection and [illegible] He certainly won us completely.

After the warmth of the third cup of [illegible] Bruce brought up the subject of Connie himself. He then told us the story of his love affair with her the summer before.

Bruce Lloyd did not tell us the whole story that night. I doubt he never told us all of it. But during the days he spent with us bits of it came out.

Read tomorrow how Julie reconstructs Lloyd's version of romance.

Scotties Parade



By Annice Brink

A JACKETED FROCK whose top bears one of the favorites of the season—a tricky print—is modelled by Miss Mary Benton of Belmont, a debutante of this season. On close inspection you'll find that the snug little, tight little jacket has uncountable Scotties in their best mind-our-own-business pose. A dicky front shows a bow and vestee of the same print, which are part of a complete, wearable top for the crepe skirt.

The felt Breton is worn in the newest manner—off-the-face. The Scotty jacket frock, which costs under fifteen dollars, is from a Boston shop; for details, phone Annice Brink, Fashion Editor, LIBerty 4000, or write her at the Boston Evening American.

Three Units In Beauty Package

By THE BEAUTY EDITOR

THERE'S really nothing like a complete facial in a beauty salon these days to make you feel that yours isn't such a bad, old face after all.

If you are at the cosmetic crossroads, however, and have come to realize that all of life can't be spent in a luxurious salon with [illegible] where the home facial comes in.

[illegible] uncommon sight [illegible] to see women in [illegible] at windows with magnifying mirrors studying the ravages of a fast departing winter.

Whether you are 16 or 60 [illegible] for a new facial package that wraps up the special [illegible] treatment in one [illegible] the perfect answer of caring for the skin at home.

This [illegible] a little but comprehensive. You buy in one unit three superb preparations to [illegible] a special dry skin cream to [illegible] the natural oils [illegible] and a most refreshing skin lotion that normalizes pores and leaves the skin cool and fresh.

The [illegible] whipped cleansing cream is the same cream of which I told you about last fall and which you went quite mad [illegible] Now it's offered [illegible] the same size jar with two other preparations for the small sum of $1.00.

If you walked into any department store in the country and [illegible] these preparations separately you would [illegible] a little [illegible] back from a [illegible] dollar [illegible] so you can see what a real bargain this is.

To learn the name of this 1-2-3 [illegible] facial package that sells for $1.00, call Miss Shelby, Liberty 4000, or write to her at the Boston Evening American, Boston, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope for a personal reply.

THE LINDBERGH CRIME—By Sidney B. Whipple—Blue Ribbon.

The story of the Lindbergh crime has been told in a million headlines.

But here for the first time, are the scattered jigsaw pieces of that [illegible] which shocked a world, fitted together in a solid factual presentation.

Written by a star reporter, who sat directly behind Hauptmann at the trial, this work is not the melodrama of a news flash but a fascinating history of the years of investigation which led to arrest and conviction.

Mr. Whipple may be complimented on the fairness of his approach. [illegible] angles to the case, such as the suicide of Violet Sharpe and the scheming of Gaston B. Means, are given only the attention they deserve.

The [illegible] which arose during the search for the kidnaper are a fascinating story in themselves.

The apprehension of Hauptmann [illegible] the middle of the book [illegible] half is devoted to a [illegible] of the trial.

Modern Miss Goes in Search of Opportunity

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DO YOU remember Tennyson's poem called "Marianna in the Moated Grange?"

This classic relates the story of a young lady who sat with folded hands, murmuring from time to time: "He cometh not."

Though the poem was written more than sixty years ago we still have [illegible] with us to-day and are [illegible] to have them till the end of the chapter. They are the girls who [illegible] wait for opportunities to be handed to them on a silver salver.

But alongside of the Marianas a new type of girl has sprung up. This is the girl who doesn't wait. She goes out and gets what she wants out of life, whether it is a home, a husband, a career, travel or more interesting experiences than sitting in a corner and murmuring "He cometh not."

* * *

The Washington papers recently told of Miss [illegible] a government clerk still in her twenties and a college graduate who has typed her way around the world for the third time.

The idea of making her stenography and typing pay her way 'round the world occurred when she was in the War Department. One day she took up a government map and picked out the farthest away place in the United States. She [illegible] succeeded in getting a transfer to that city. Her next move was to Honolulu where she [illegible] from the government service and took a job with an ice company.

Seeing the ships leave for Japan started visions of the Far East. This time she [illegible] a job as a newspaper correspondent.

* * *

Not long ago I had a [illegible] diverting letter from a graduate nurse, who told me that nursing and seeing people die had wrecked her nerves. She had been out of the hospital [illegible] years but being capable a [illegible] of doctors kept her busy. However she began to hate the work and felt herself on the verge of a breakdown.

Her saving bought a decent car. She learned to drive and took a special course in mechanics to be able to manage minor breakdowns on the road. [illegible] she advertised for passengers to drive to different parts of the United States. She was very careful to look into the references of these people and [illegible] her selection from women [illegible] parents with children. She loves this work and for several years has been most successful [illegible] doing it.

Few Carrots Aid the Skin

Question: Are carrots good for the complexion? I have heard that eating them in large quantities will cause the skin to eventually turn yellow. Please tell me whether this is true.

Mrs. T. E. T. Walpole.

Answer: Carrots are often recommended as a complexion aid if not eaten too often. If eaten once or twice a week they will help in keeping the skin clear. Too many carrots will make the skin yellow, however. Tomatoes are a beauty food and while they contain a large percentage of water they also contain carbohydrates, protein, calcium and iron, all good for the human system.

Question: Will you please tell me what shade of powder and lipstick I should wear? I have brown hair, blue eyes, and olive skin. Please print my answer in your beauty column.

B. L. K., Milford

Answer: Choose your powder in any of the light, cream or natural shades. A cerise flame, scarlet or poppy colored lipstick should be very flattering to your particular type. I have a color chart which tells you the various make-up combinations for your type. If you would like this chart, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to me.

Question: Thank you for all the help you have given me. I am writing again for more information. Will you please send me the anti-brown spot leaflet, the hair dyeing and dandruff leaflets? Please tell me also the name of the tonic that promotes normal scalp and hair health. I am under weight and would like to know how I can gain a few pounds.

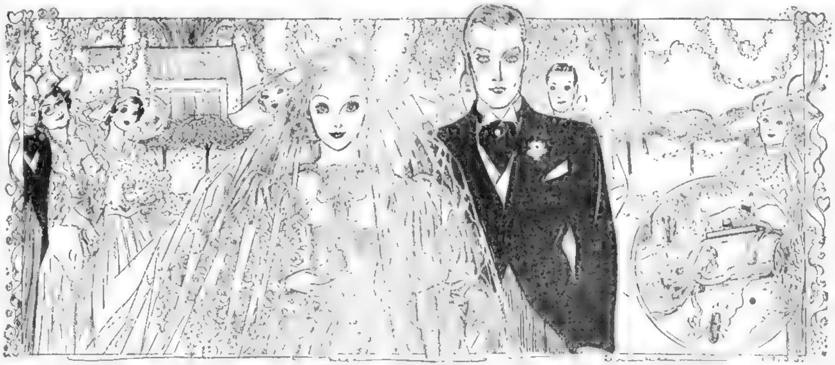
M. Adeline L., Woonsocket, R. I.

Answer: Since you neglected to enclose a stamped self-addressed envelope with your request I am unable to send these leaflets along. Write to me again, enclosing necessary return postage and the information you desire will be forward. I have a weight-gaining leaflet which you may also have at the same time.

The Fortunes of Fanny

SHE MARRIES HER AMERICAN

By Nell Brinkley



Here we leave Fanny, back home in America, radiantly and seriously marrying her young man. Father and Mother are not saying, "Now, FANNY!" For they like Fanny's marriage. They will not say, "Now, Fanny," until Fanny has her baby and does not do exactly with it as Mother and Father think is best! Fanny is "Fanchon" no more. She has forgotten that.

The clever young lady who "handles" my pictures and sees that they are made properly for this paper, says, "Ohhh, so this is the end of Fanny. I liked her." I hope you have, too. But it is NOT the end of Fanny. It is the beginning of real life for her; and, we'll hope, for happiness for her and her "beau."

There is no happiness, when it is happy, like that of being married to the person you love and who loves you.

Bon Voyage, Fanny, my dear!

—NELL BRINKLEY.

CHAPTER 301

LILLIAN'S explanation gave me just the opportunity I needed to pull myself together, after the shock of my mother-in-law's answer to my query as to whether the bell she had heard might not have been a bicycle bell.

I had asked the question almost carelessly, but at her prompt affirmative my thoughts had flown to Junior and Roderick, both of whom possessed bicycles.

"Yes that's Jerry, all right," Lillian commented with a grin. "He probably was also the lad who was flashing a light around. I think I'll put a flea in his [illegible] He's too old a lad to be [illegible] tricks like that."

She strolled with apparent aimlessness to the window from which my mother-in-law said she [illegible] flashing.

"I'm the well-known cat for curiosity," she said, "and I would like to know where Jerry did that flashing so that it would show in your window. Come over here, Madge, and see if your lynx eyes can [illegible] it out."

"Don't let her guess anything," Lillian said from the corner of her mouth, in the noiseless fashion she acquired in her secret service work, "but let's get out of here as soon as we can. That flashing must have come from the bungalow."

BICYCLES GONE, TOO

I caught my breath in sudden panic at the remembrance that during his convalescence from his terrible illness, following the jab of a mysterious poisoned needle in the sealed envelope in Marion's lock box, Lee Chow at our invitation had spent much of his time in the bungalow in the orchard that Dicky had fitted up [illegible]

"Death on the Rails"

Cambridge Man Finds Grim Spectre Can Come Close!

By FLOYD GIBBONS

HELLO, EVERYBODY!

There used to be an old saying to the effect that knowledge is power. Well, I wouldn't know about that because I never had much of either.

But Frank Silva of 349 Columbia street, Cambridge, could probably put a new twist on the adage.

FLOYD GIBBONS

Frank could tell you that knowledge is SAFETY, for Frank got into a terrible jam once because of being a little short of a certain kind of savvy.

If he had known the difference between a freight car and a milk car, he might have saved himself a fright that made a total wreck out of him for weeks after his experience happened.

Now Frank, of course, could tell a milk car from a box car when he saw it.

At the time this story opens, back in June, 1925, Frank was doing odd jobs as an extra flagman for the Boston and Albany railroad.

Whenever a gate was broken around the yards, Frank flagged the crossing until it was fixed. In his work he saw all kinds of cars—could tell a milk car as far as he could see it.

The thing Frank DIDN'T know was that milk cars have a certain peculiarity that makes them different from all other freight cars. And there came a time when knowing that difference made up the balance between life and death for Frank.

Well, sir, the 19th of June found Frank Silva hanging around the railroad yard at East Cambridge, and sort of hoping that some careless truck driver would bust another gate and furnish him with a day's work.

And as he roamed about the yards, whiling away the time, he noticed something that struck him as being just a bit unusual.

It was a milk car, being pushed down a spur track by a switching engine. And since there were no milk companies anywhere in the vicinity of that particular yard, Frank wondered what it was doing there.

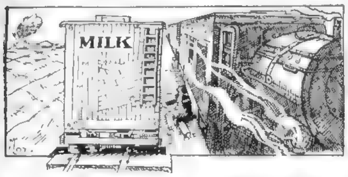
Curiosity killed the cat! Frank had seen a lot of milk cars rolling by on through freights, but he'd never seen one close at hand before. He thought he'd like to take a look at this one, so he ambled out over the tracks, headed in its direction.

Before Frank got through looking over that car, he had learned something about milk cars in general that will stick in his mind for many and many a day to come.

Curiosity killed the cat—and it came doggone near killing Frank Silva. The milk car, hooked to the switching engine, was being pushed in a westerly direction along a side track that ran parallel to the main line.

And down the main line a freight train was coming—a big one, consisting of about 40 cars—running in the opposite direction to the one the milk car was taking.

Frank saw the train coming as he stepped out onto the track, but that didn't bother him.



He figured he could get across the track before it got there.

True, on the other side of the track was the spur along which the milk car was traveling, but that didn't worry Frank either.

In a pinch, he thought, he could stand between the two trains until one of them had passed.

There was plenty of clearance room between the main line and the spur, and Frank had often stood between them when two freights were passing.

Frank crossed the track in front of the oncoming freight. Then, as the milk car came backing up the track, he stepped in between the tracks to let it go by. If all had gone as Frank figured it would, that milk car would have gone by while he stood between it and the moving freight.

But too late, Frank learned something about milk cars that he had never know before—THAT THEY ARE SOME THREE FEET WIDER THAN THE ORDINARY BOX CARS!

Too late, Frank saw what must inevitably happen. The clearance between the freight and the wide-bodied milk car wasn't large enough to hold his body.

There wasn't time enough, either, for him to run across the spur track in front of the oncoming car.

It seemed to him then that he must die one of two deaths. Either he would try to cross the track and be crushed under the milk car's wheels or he would stay where he was and be crushed between its side and the side of the passing freight.

And while he stood there, wondering what to do, Fate decided for him. He felt a terrific blow on the back of the head as the end of the milk car struck him. Then he fell to the ground.

As he fell, he wondered where he was falling to—wondered if he would land under the wheels of either of those moving trains.

Dimly he remembers hearing a screeching of brakes, the frantic yelling of a brakeman. Then, mercifully, he lost consciousness.

When Frank came to again, the milk car had passed and was moving slowly on down the track.

The freight was still moving and Frank was lying between the tracks almost under the wheels of the passing cars.

His head was not six inches from the waste-boxes of the cars—and when Frank paused to think that a six inch difference in falling—a six-inch movement of his body after he was down—would have caused death, or permanent injury, why he nearly passed out again.

And when, finally, he managed to summon enough strength to crawl away from his precarious position, it was with a feeling that he didn't want to see another railroad track for the rest of his natural life.

Well, sir, I am sending 10 big green simoleons to Frank Silva for that tip about milk cars, and I will mail out the same dose of dough to anybody else who will tip me off about their true adventure yarns, if acceptable. Tomorrow: "The Hangman Who Smiled."

Music written by unknowns will be the basis of Fred Waring's musical schedule on the air (WNAC) tonight between 9:30 and 10:30 p. m. Fred and his popular "Pennsylvanians" group have selected three meritorious compositions for interpretation.

First of these picked for presentation is one written by a business college girl. Then comes the effort of a fireman employed in an oil refining plant and, thirdly, the tune creation of a sergeant of the Army quartermaster corps.

Many months of judging thousands of amateur contributions, with Fred Waring himself in the role of judge, has resulted in the above three pieces being picked. Vocal versions by the singers, co-workers of Waring, will also be a part of the presentation. Special arrangements of the numbers, made ready by the band boss and his men, will lend added color and appeal to the original scores.

Noah Beery, Roger Pryor, Peggy Conklin, the Tic-Toc girls, Tom Howard and George Sheldon, will join Rudy Vallee as guest stars on his weekly program (WEEI) due again this evening at 8:30 p. m.

"Saturday's Children," written by Maxwell Anderson, will form the variety program dramatic "act." The cast will include Roger Pryor, Mae West's handsome leading man in the "Belle of the Gay Nineties," and Peggy Conklin, currently appearing on Broadway in "The Petrified Forest."

* * *

Eddie Peabody, wizard of the banjo, will appear on Capt. Henry's "Show Boat" airing (WEEI) as guest star when the romantic make-believe side-wheeler "docks" at Jacksonville, Fla. Meaning tonight on the stroke of 10 p. m.

John Herrick, featured baritone on the "Gems of Melody" program (WBZ), has gone to the works of Richard Wagner to choose his solo offering, made ready for 7:15 to 7:45 broadcasting this evening.

He will sing "Traume," one of Wagner's most melodious lyric compositions. Herrick also will be heard in two excerpts from the new motion picture, "Mississippi," singing with the "Gems of Melody" Quartet and the Tone Chorus.

* * *

Among the entertainers enthusiastically applauded at the Martha Lee Cooking School graduation yesterday was Ernest Naun, robust radio baritone often heard over WEEI channels.

Naun is attracting listener attention aplenty in local circles lately.

He was accompanied at the piano by his sister, Catherine Naun.

Claire Nerulis, well known juvenile star who has been heard on "X-9 Club" programs, also entertained at the exercises with Ruth Hanson at the piano.

Radio Answers

Q—Who are the men who play "Lum and Abner" and do they take all of the character parts in their sketch?

T. O. D., of Dorchester.

A—Chester Lauck is "Lum" and Norris Goff is "Abner." They were formerly on the dramatic stage.

Q—How will it be possible for Frank Parker to sing with Jack Benny here in Boston at 7 o'clock next Sunday night, then also be with Charles (Capt'n. Henry) Winninger during his broadcast in New York at 7:30 the same evening?

G. F. S., of Quincy.

A—Good question. However, the series with Frank Parker and Winninger was concluded last Sunday night—Will Rogers taking over the spot Sunday.

Q—Some days ago your column said Max Baer might be back on the air soon? Is this true and if so when? Fight Fan, of Newton.

A—At present the next appearance on the air by the champ is to be with Al Jolson on April 6th. Maxie will have his brother Buddy with him.

Q—What nationality is Guy Lombardo and what is his age? Also the nationality of Wayne King and his age please?

K. C. of Dorchester.

A—Guy is a Canadian and 31 years old. Wayne is a Chicago chap and 32 years old.

Q—Is the wife of Paul Whiteman, meaning Margaret Livingstone any relation to Mary Livingston? Sisters, of Salem

A—No, there is no family connection, although they are very friendly with one another. Besides, no "e" is on the end of Mary's name

Q—Does Eddie Cantor really wear comical clothes when he broadcasts as the announcer says?

Amused, of Brookline

A—Yes, and so does Ed Wynn. They are the only two comics who do so extensively, although Walter O'Keefe sometimes works in costume.

JUNIOR BIRDMEN OF AMERICA

LAWRENCE SHAW NATIONAL DIRECTOR

DEVOTED TO THE INTEREST OF THE YOUTH OF THE AMERICAS IN AVIATION

The national Popular Pilot Poll will close Sunday, and, to be counted, all votes both by members and non-members, must be in the mails, postmarked no later than Sunday midnight.

Squadron commanders who are racing for the first wing banner are particularly urged to watch this rule. No points will be awarded in the banner contest for any votes placed in the mail after midnight Sunday.

All members who have yet to vote are asked to fill in the ballot on this page and mail it immediately to Birdmen headquarters, 100 Summer st., in order that their opinions may be registered. Also votes for official favorite color combination.

The Popular Pilot Poll has been conducted to determine the aviator who is best liked by the youth of this nation. And so seriously has this first straw vote been taken that all wing commanders, including the Boston wing commander, must go before a notary public after all votes are counted and swear to the accuracy of the count.

The final results won't be known until a full compilation of the tens of thousands of votes has been made.

Surgeon, 79, Dies

New York, March 28—Dr. Adolph Monaelesser, 79, who was surgeon-in-chief of the American Red Cross during the war with Spain, died in his apartment here.

BAYLESS UNIT

Send a postal, giving your name and full address, when your supply of report sheets is exhausted.

BAYLESS PURSUIT Squadron 33 of New Bedford. Commander, Joseph Giammalva.

After the commander called the meeting to order and the flag was saluted, Captain Edward Weworzyniak read the minutes of the last meeting. All members indicate readiness to fight to the last for the wing banner. Norman England, librarian, announced the library is now open. A debate was postponed. The commander reviewed the Eagle test for three new members and a general discussion followed.

FLIGHT OF ICARUS Squadron 244 of Woonsocket, R. I. Commander, Hector Farland. Banner points, 346.

Meeting at Captain George Gaynon's home. Omer Gaynor, George Vanhowe and Robert Galipean, were admitted to the unit. Commander Farland will talk at the next meeting. Almost all members have built flying models and are passing them in for inspection. Several members attended a theater party.

CLOUD BUSTERS Squadron 234 of East Milton. Commander, David Purcell, Banner points, 43.

Formal initiation was held by the squadron after which a table model contest was held. Arrangements were made for airplane rides and ten members took flights. Robert Dattman is captain.

RED KNIGHTS Squadron 84 of Everett. Commander, Earl C. Baggs. Banner points, 4.

A baby R. O. G. contest is planned for the week of April 19. Points will be scored as follows: 5 for first place, 3 for second and 1 for third. Books, pamphlets and magazines brought in by members will be used for instruction. Lieutenantcy ratings will be made possible.

FALCON Squadron 270 of North Taunton. Commander, George Washburn. Banner points 38.

Captain Roger C. Andrews reports that all members were present at the latest meeting. Dues were collected and the rest of the meeting was devoted to working on No. 1 model plane.

FLYING COMETS Squadron 404 of Madison, Maine. Commander, Robert Bearer. Banner points, 4.

Captain Dick Hillman reports there was election of officers and five cents a week voted as dues. A model plane meet will be held as soon as weather permits. A Condor Transport will be first prize for flying models and smaller models for second and third prizes.

Man Found Dead

New York, March 28 (AP)—Otis J. Hallowell, 50, of Providence, R. I., was found dead in his bed in a room at a hotel here. A hotel physician said death was caused apparently by a heart attack.

WEATHER REPORT

For Boston and Vicinity—Rain this evening and early tonight; lowest temperature near freezing; Friday fair and slightly colder; moderate to fresh southeasterly shifting to westerly winds.

Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut—Rain tonight; Friday fair, slightly colder in interior.

Maine—Rain and slightly warmer tonight; Friday fair and colder.

New Hampshire and Vermont—Rain this afternoon and tonight; Friday fair and colder.

Eastern New York—Cloudy with rain this afternoon and probably in east portion early tonight; colder tonight; Friday generally fair.

Atlantic Coast, Eastport to Sandy Hook—Fresh to strong southeast and south winds, shifting to westerly tonight and diminishing Friday, and overcast weather with rain tonight; Friday generally fair.

For Shippers—Protect perishable shipments moving west, north and northeast for temperatures of 20 to 30 degrees next 36 hours.

WEATHER CONDITIONS

The barometric pressure is slightly above normal over New England, and the western trough of low pressure has moved eastward, now extending from Ontario, where the lowest reported is 29.66 inches at Parry Sound, southward over the Appalachian ridge to eastern Tennessee and northern Georgia. Light rains have occurred over most of this area and there have been light snows in northern districts from Michigan to the Dakotas. Clear weather prevails in the Central Valleys and thence westward to California, under the influence of a ridge of high pressure that has extended its influence eastward from the Pacific coast to the Mississippi valley. The temperatures are slightly higher in the Eastern States, and a little lower west of the Ohio Valley.

The American Creed

Administration for Defense

SINCE it was instituted by the Military Order of the World War, Army Day—which falls on April 6—has been an occasion of great significance.

During the pacifist years that followed the great conflict the National Defense Act passed by Congress in 1920 became almost a dead-letter law.

Its mandatory terms went unfulfilled and such peace-time military establishment as we had was reduced by neglect and political niggardliness to the point of sheer danger.

In those fatuous times Army Day served the important function of asserting annually the necessity of carrying out the National Defense Act.

TODAY, thanks to the Democratic Administration and the Democratic Congress, the statute has received vindication. The pending army bill is a long step toward the execution of its provisions for the national security.

And so it is convenient as well as altogether fitting that Army Day this year should be devoted in part to an additional purpose—to a nation-wide declaration of faith in the principles of democracy and civil liberty and of loyalty to the historic institutions of the Republic.

AMERICANISM and PATRIOTISM will be the slogans of the day.

PREPARATIONS for the nation-wide observance of Army Day are proceeding with full official sanction.

The Governors of Hawaii and of a score or more of States have issued proclamations.

Congress has by joint resolution authorized Federal participation, and the President himself will be heard.

All military and naval organizations, including the veterans and the civilian reserves, are to co-operate with the various civic groups in their localities in this national demonstration of loyalty.

And somewhere in the ranks there should be a place for every citizen who believes in America.

He Might Be President

Man Who Worked Hard

His associates of early days recall a raw-boned young school teacher, dealing out punishment to some mischievous small boy in a tiny country school.

This man as a country school teacher, worked hard to earn enough money for a law course at Columbia University. After he reached the University he worked hard, and he has worked hard ever since.

And because he has worked hard, used and developed the intelligence inherited from good ancestry, he is now Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States. If he would accept it he might be nominated and elected President of the United States.

Among four Republicans mentioned by W. R. Hearst as desirable candidates on the Republican side. Charles Evans Hughes came first; Hiram Johnson of California, Senator Norris of Nebraska, Senator Borah of Idaho, were the other three.

There are four genuine, able Americans, and among them Mr. Justice Hughes has risen highest in the service of the nation.

This will remind American boys that they can succeed, although there is a "catch" in it. The catch is YOU MUST WORK HARD.

A Prince's Headache

It's American Money

A charming five and ten-cent store heiress who married some kind of an European prince and tired of him soon, is warned by her managers, that if she continues giving money away so rapidly, she will soon be poor.

She is said to have distributed in one year already thirteen millions of her forty-two million dollar inheritance. That may explain the terrible headaches from which the prince is said to have suffered as soon as he looked into the books.

Heirs and heiresses of rich men, giving away their money generously or spending it in stupid extravagance and luxury as a majority of them do, are demonstrating the "mysterious ways" of Providence.

A rich man's money goes to a son made worthless by overindulgence and lack of responsibility. He distributes it at tracks, clubs, gambling houses, in various attempts to purchase interesting sensations for an inconsequential mind.

Bye and bye it is gone. Those that beg, borrow or steal it, must all eat and wear clothes; soon the money goes back to the farmers and the merchants.

Then some other man of ability, with the lash of necessity driving him, begins all over again, piles up a fortune, makes a fool of his son, and so it goes.

PERFECT SYSTEM, but it is woven into such prosperity and civilization as we have!

Local College Feels Demand

Old style hit or miss methods in placing graduates are being changed by the Boston University College of Business Administration.

New England concerns were circularized by the college authorities for the dual purpose of placing graduates and informing employers of the rich sources of material furnished by New England colleges.

The response was excellent. A fine commentary on the far-sightedness of the college authorities and the alertness of New England business men.

The home product has too often been gravitating to other centers.

Russia Uses Forks

But on What?

Russia is exulting. It appears that the Russians are beginning to shave themselves, and to brush their teeth and—wonder of wonders!—to use forks as well as knives when they eat.

That's swell. Now if the Russians get something to stick their forks into, if they get a little solid food, they will only have a dozen years or so to go to reach the status of the poorest Americans.

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

DOES CHIVALRY PAY?

Just how far—if at all—should chivalry go in 1935?

This idea of protecting the Dear Little Woman — and shouldering the blame for everything she does—should or shouldn't that be expected of Modern Males?

Elsie Robinson

And is such protection either a favor or a compliment to the Dear Little Woman herself?

Why'm I asking? Because of one of those typical office jams. The boss away—one woman and four men left in charge of the office. An important letter arrived.

The woman should have attended to it and didn't. She forgot. So it went unanswered, and a week later there was heck to pay with the boss going wild and wanting to know How Come.

COMMON SITUATION

Promptly the four, gallant gentlemen took the blame, and the woman let 'em.

A common enough situation. You'll see it happen in every place where men and women work together. And, of course, it's done in 999 out of 1000 divorces.

"Quite right," you'll probably say. BUT IS IT "QUITE RIGHT"? Should women be so privileged and protected in these days of feminine freedom and equality?

If a woman is really entitled to have equality should, or shouldn't she, go the whole way?

If she's fit to compete in business with men—take jobs from men—assume the responsibilities of men—shouldn't she also face the consequences of any blunders she may make? Or should men step in and save her from said consequences?

WHEN ALL GOES WELL

I believe she should—and they shouldn't. If women wish to be be treated as people, they should pay the price.

IT'S AS CONTEMPTIBLE FOR A WOMAN TO "CRY OFF" AS IT IS FOR A MAN . . . AND AS BAD FOR HER CHARACTER.

If a woman can't Take It in public life, she shouldn't start. And with shame I am forced to admit that many of Us Girls can't.

We're magnificent workers as long as everything is going nicely. We're smart, shrewd and tireless.

But let something go wrong and we immediately look for someone, usually a man, to shoulder the blame. And what's the poor boy to do? If he doesn't take the rap, he's a Dirty Dog. And if he does—what then?

Usually there is little hesitation. Men pride themselves on being chivalrous almost as much in 1935 as in 1395. And most women are foolish enough to think that's flattering to their sex. But it doesn't necessarily follow.

Chivalry isn't always prompted by consideration—it quite often is based upon vanity.

YOU'VE SIDESTEPPED

Many a male has made himself appear, big, brave and brilliant merely by protecting a dumb female. And women never had a lower Mental Rating than when Knighthood was In Flower.

So don't be so sure that you've pulled a Swift One, sister, merely because you've shifted the burden to broader shoulders.

You've side-stepped trouble temporarily. But there's a judgment day coming!

And this applies not only to our business relationships, but to private life as well.

I cannot see that anything is gained by the popular practice of expecting the man to be the goat on all occasions.

This pernicious practice begins in the nursery, when Junior is wrathfully enjoined never—never —NEVER to "hit little sister." But why shouldn't little sister be walloped if she has wished it upon herself?

She demands and enjoys all the privileges of little brother, doesn't she? Then why not let her take her trimming if she deserves it?

WHY, THE QUESTION

Nor can I see that sister should be protected—from the consequences of her own cussedness when she has become a Mrs.

Why, for example, should gentlemen invariably shoulder the onus of unpleasant divorce proceedings.

"Because a child needs to respect its mother!" is the popular theory.

Piffle! A child doesn't need to respect its mother any more than it needs to respect its father.

And if a mother isn't worth respecting, why lower union standards by giving her first class recognition?

All of which isn't going to make me popular with the rest of my sex. BUT WHAT'S YOUR ANSWER, LADIES?

Words of Wise

Be thou self-possessed; then thou hast the art of living.—Goethe.

Live your life while you have it. Life is a splendid gift.—Florence Nightingale.

Much of man's character comes from other men. We are deep in debt to others.—C. H. Spurgeon.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

New York, March 28—The Bronx seems to be doing everything possible to make Dr. John F. Condon feel that it regrets its doubting moment. There was a brief period when the Lindbergh emissary was almost obscured by a cloud of suspicion. There was much head wagging. And there still is in some circles.

O. O. McIntyre

But today he has been restored to the borough's municipal heart with renewed fervor. They cannot forget that his opening remark on the witness stand became a vigorous trade-last for "the most beautiful section of the city." Intimates say he felt keenly several slights.

Following his testimony he went for a long cruise. When he returned he shunned the restaurants where he often stopped for a cup of coffee. He left his house only late at night for long walks. He was annoyed that trained snoopers continued to watch his movements.

Now he is again the Bronx's Grand Old Man. He is being followed along the streets and his promenades have become a daily triumph. An enterprising builder has registered plans for an apartment house to be called "The Jafsie." A movement has been started for a Condon avenue and a Condon Park.

Cholly Knickerbocker's discovery that the spectacular sportsman, Foxhall Keene, had fallen on lean days, was still another symbol of the world's changing fortunes. Even his name was almost a yoick suggesting pink coats and hunt breakfasts.

He was, with Larry Waterbury, one of the most daring polo players and exploited many winners at the tracks. He was one of the few rich men who liked New York in the summer and almost nightly in formal attire dined alone on the Ritz roof.

Theodor once told me Keene knew how to order a meal better than any gourmet of his day. He made a rite of the evening meal and disliked company.

George Jean Nathan is no slouch among the modern epicures. He also has an evening or so a week when he edges a table, usually at the Colony, in white-tied elegance. His excursions to Europe are largely to satisfy a practised palate.

In his "Paris After 8:15" he does some fancy rhapsodizing over cold salmon with sauce Crilliche and artichokes made sentimental with that Beethoven-like fluid orchestrated out of caviar and ham boiled in claret touched up with spinach au gratin and of duckling tinged with the peel of bitter oranges oo la la!

I called on a friend today who has undergone a desperate eye operation and will be in total darkness for several months, perhaps forever. His nurse specializes in attending those newly blind. Her every movement is recorded in a swiftly soft murmur.

In entering the room she voices her progress such as, "I am walking around the bed to lower the window curtain, etc., etc." The patient said the effect of having a mental picture was extraordinarily soothing. He found he wasn't crying so much.

Few writing men salvage so much fun out of turning out a book as Hendrik Willem Van Loon. His household and his publishing house, during his writing periods, are in constant and feverish uproar.

When not writing he has the amiability of a lumbering St. Bernard, but when he settles down to his chore he is a desk pounder, shouter of unseemly epithets and a human tornado.

He carries on the business of literature in the manner of a three-ring circus, with himself cracking the whip as ring-master, adding touches here and there authentically Caesarish. Finished, he's a heavyweight cherub again.

I know of no such depressing street in Manhattan as Henry. More than any other American scene it has the ditch-water squalor of Limehouse. Unlighted flats with faint blobs of gas in the halls. Listless children who idle on the curb.

Women who lean out windows staring dumbly. Hungry prowling cats. Misery in an outline of charcoal. Smudgy, indistinct.

Thingumabobs: Noah Webster was once a postal inspector . . . Moliere read his writing output to his cook . . . Jack Dempsey's father calls him Willie . . . Peggy Joyce will not answer the phone until after 6 p. m. . . .

Maxwell Bodenheim, discovering the poetry outlook discouraging, may take a tramp for the South Seas . . . Frazier Hunt is off for some distant land again. . . . The largest rug in town is in the Waldorf lobby.

Just as a full night of sleep loomed I came upon a letter signed Trixie Dinwixie which will have me izie wixing until sun uppie.

Our Shipping Menaced

By JAMES T. WILLIAMS, JR.

It was just about a year ago that self-seeking politicians in the Post Office Department joined hands with self-seeking politicians in the Senate and almost wrecked what was then the Eighth Wonder of the World—our matchless system of Air Transport.

These self-seeking politicians began their attack upon Air Transport by staging a series of so-called hearings. These hearings were apparently designed to set the stage for what followed. They were not fact-finding, in any judicial sense. No honest attempt was made to get at the whole truth and nothing but the truth. The attempt was to discredit all American Air Transport.

Presently the sinister purpose of this whole disgraceful proceeding was made manifest. The Post Office wing of this political alliance suddenly cancelled all domestic air mail contracts. They were cancelled without a hearing.

The cancellation of these contracts came close to wrecking all American Air Transport. As a result, this splendid system of communication and transportation, this vital auxiliary of the National Defense, was dealt a body blow from which it will be years in recovering.

At the moment a Committee of the House is considering emergency remedial legislation, the sole purpose of which is to repair as quickly as possible some of the damage done to these air lines before they are driven into bankruptcy and the whole system sent crashing to the ground.

Not content with this record of wrecking operations, the same political wrecking crew is apparently getting ready to torpedo what is left of the American Merchant Marine.

Some of the same politicians who aided and abetted the attempt on the life of our Air Transport appear to be setting the stage to discredit what is left of our Merchant Marine.

Day after day the House Committee, starting hearings, has been told by these political witnesses how bad the American Merchant Marine is.

There is a limit even in this country to public patience. And signs are beginning to appear that the patience of the American people with political wrecking crews is nearing an end.

George V King 25 Years

Human Side of the News

THE GLOBE TROTTER OF HEARST METROTONE NEWS

By Edwin C. Hill

The slim, medium-sized man with the round shoulders, white hair, iron-gray beard, pleasant blue eyes and ruddy complexion will have been a king twenty-five years in May.

Edwin C. Hill

The following month he will reach his Biblical three-score years and ten. So, come what may, England will make a big time of it.

John Bull loves his pageantry, gold coaches, caparisoned chargers and he would trot them out and sing "God Save the King" even if the monarch of the day was Richard III. or George III.

But there will be a wholeheartedness and a warmth to the celebration this spring. Britannia loves her George V.

No man or woman has sat on the throne of England, from William the Conqueror down, and claimed more esteem and affection from his subjects than this same George Frederick Ernest Albert Windsor, son of Edward VII. and grandson of Victoria.

KING BY DESTINY

Destiny made him a king. He was born on June 3, 1865, the second son of Edward and Alexandra. His father then was Prince of Wales and remained so for the thirty odd years that followed of Victoria's long reign.

Next to the father in line for the throne was an elder brother, the Duke of Clarence.

As boys—George was 14—the two were sent around the world on a cruise, and George from that day was marked for the sea and comparative oblivion.

But the Duke of Clarence died in early manhood, whereupon the matchmaking Victoria chose for George the Princess Mary of Teck.

And, as the story books say, they were married and set about living happily afterward and living simply.

King Edward died in 1906, and England turned to inspect the King of Sailors who was to take the place of the King of Good Fellows.

They found George and Mary to be pretty ordinary folk who had devoted their thirteen years mostly to raising a family, for between 1894 and 1905 six children, five boys and a girl, had been born to them.

The coronation fuss over, they retired to Buckingham and for eight more years kept in the background, the nominal rulers of an empire.

The war smoked them out to reveal George as an upstanding, wise and prudent ruler and Mary as a motherly woman, entirely devoted to her people and their cause.

Today, as A. G. Gardiner so aptly says, "you may draw a line from Calais to Vladivostok through the former realms of the great emperors without touching a foot of soil presided over by a monarchy."

STABLE MONARCHY

Those who would point to Italy are reminded that the House of Savoy is overshadowed by Mussolini as dictator.

The stability of the British monarchy may be due in large part to the limitations of power, but the character and saneness of George V has played no small part in maintaining that stability.

He remains to this day a rather shy man, who, when occasion demands, can use the strong language of the sea or in polished phrases and resonant voice address his 463,000,000 subjects over the radio.

He takes his three or four whiskey and sodas a day, smokes cigarettes in public and a pipe in private.

He is fond of animals, collects postage stamps as a hobby and is yet one of the best wing shots in the world. One chapter in their lives shows the mettle of George and Mary of England.

For five years after their coronation the story that was spread around the world was to the effect that in the year 1890 the King had been married on the Island of Malta to the daughter of Sir Michael Culme-Seymour, an admiral of the British navy.

No one dared publish the story in England, but in 1910 it appeared in a Paris leaflet, one of the editors of which was an Englishman, Edward Mylius.

Mylius was convicted and sentenced to a year in prison.

Immediately after the verdict, Sir Rufus Isaacs read a letter from the King stating that the King had never married anyone save the present Queen and had never gone through any form of wedding ceremony with any person except the Queen. Such is George of England, 25 years a King.

Dip Into Prophecy

By Hendrik Van Loon

It will be at least a week before this article can be put into print. I am therefore taking quite a chance when I garb myself in the mantle of the prophet.

But here and now and while the capitals of the world are groaning with despair, and statesmen are trembling with indignation, and editorial writers are denouncing latest announcements from Berlin about the proposed army reorganization, I am willing to go on oath that absolutely nothing at all will be done about this latest pronunciamento.

In the plainest of all possible language I want to go on record as saying that Germany will get away with all her plans, and that nobody will even dream of trying to make her desist.

Within the next two months Germany will go back to the status of the year 1914.

Instead of an Emperor with a spiked helmet and a long, gray cape, she will obey the commands of a civilian in a funny-looking cap and a shabby old raincoat.

That will be about the only difference visible to the naked eye of the unenlightened commoner. And the diplomats, armed with the best of spy glasses, won't be able to see anything else.

* * *

Now when one plays the role of prophet (unless one is directly inspired by a voice from Heaven or Hell) one is usually supposed to offer a few words of explanation for an assertion of quite such a sweeping nature.

In the first place it is an old and generally accepted rule of the legal profession that when a plaintiff intends to go into a court of law, it is highly desirable for him to know that his own hands are more or less clean.

For example, when I intend to accuse my neighbors of having poached upon my grounds, I had better be quite sure that I myself have not been poaching upon their grounds.

Germany undoubtedly violated the Treaty of Versailles, but all other nations have been violating that treaty ever since the minute it was signed.

Germany had been defeated, but she had not been defeated so badly that she could not have gone on for at least another six months of dreadful destruction. (I am not inventing this. I am basing my contentions upon the words of the late Marshal Foch, who probably knew what he was talking about.)

But this had been the war to end war, and all the other nations therefore solemnly pledged themselves to obey the Wilsonian dictates and to begin at once upon the task of reducing their armies and navies to an absolutely irreducible minimum.

The other nations, under one pretext or the other, have most flagrantly disregarded this solemn promise.

Incessantly they have added to their armies and to their navies, until today the world spends about eight times as much on armaments as it did in the year 1914.

Wherefore the complaining statesmen will have to come into the Court of Equity with very dirty hands, should they ever care to shake their fists at the wicked Teutons. And that, as I have said before, is no way in which to pose as the Defenders of Justice.

But in the second place, and this is even more important today, there is not a nation in this whole wide world which would dare to declare war on Germany without realizing that such a step would mean an immediate revolution among its own people.
